CURLEY, POLICE CLASH ON DOLE

Today

While the Sun Rolls On Shall We Finance Him?
One Lived Long, One Died
A Governor's Power

—By Arthur Brisbane—

FORTY-THREE SCIENTIFIC expeditions are ready to view today's eclipse. The weather bureau predicts clouds, but that won't spoil the eclipse. Night will come on gradually. Some that "know all about it" will be worried, and "feel queer."

Chickens will go to roost. Mr. Vernon Bailey, on behalf of the department of agriculture, will study them and other animals in New Hampshire, watching especially for signs of fear.

Fear of what we call "supernatural" events brings the animals close to human nature.

The area of total eclipse will be a belt of shadow 100 miles wide. To thwart the weather man, 30 aviators at various points along the shadow belt will stand ready to carry scientists above the clouds.

Hundreds of thousands have been spent that scientists may take observations during the 90 seconds that the eclipse will last.

Our old father, the sun, moving through space, shedding light and power in the form of broken down atoms, losing actual weight two hundred and fifty million tons every minute, and able to continue that loss for tens of millions of years longer, will sail on in his majestic course, dragging our earth and the other planets with him, in blissful ignorance of our "important eclipse."

This is unusual. The Rev. Harold Francis Davidson, of London, convicted in a British court of "immoralit,," says he will come here, bringing one or two young ladies in the case with him, "to raise money for his appeal" from the decision condemning him.

You need not wonder at the reverend gentleman's decision. He probably said to himself: "Americans gave ten billions of dollars, without much hope of getting it back, to nations engaged in murdering each other. They surely would give a few thousands to a British clergyman convicted of demoralizing young girls."

We know that the reverend gentleman is mistaken, but you can't expect him to know. "Those Americans are so queer."

One above the other on a front page you read two news items.

First, "a gray haired man sat on a bench in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, today and shot and killed himself." He had 27 cents concealed in the band of his hat and left a note asking to be "dropped into deep water." He dropped into deep water when he pulled the trigger.

Second, you read, "Spaniard dies at 108." Felip Juare Valle Espinoso had seven children, 50 grandsons, 61 great grandsons. If babies did not die, how soon the world would be overpopulated.

Why do of us hang on to life grimi, urging death to stay away, while others beckon death to come?

Great is the power of New York State's Governor.

Not all governors have realized it. Justice Staley, of New York's Supreme Court, refusing to enjoin Gov. Roosevelt from interfering with Mayor Walker, says the courts have no power over the governor, or of his person. For errors, if any, of law or fact, or deed, the governor is responsible not to the courts, but to his own conscience.

The Governor of New York and other states, like the President of the United States, could do almost anything. But they, and all of us, are controlled by public opinion.

New York wonders, and London says it wonders why Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England, has returned to New York and Washington.

There is no cause for wonder. When you see a farmer, tin pail in hand, approaching a cow, you do not wonder why he went to the barnyard.

Britain worries about the strike of textile workers, 90 per cent. of them, with possibility of a strike so great as to afflict 10,000,000 people. Lincoln said no country could live "half slave and half free." Britain discovers that it is troublesome to have a country half labor and half capitalism.

1100 DROWN AS WALL SAVES CHINESE CITY

Shanghai, Aug. 31 (AP)—Eleven hundred persons have been drowned at Tungkun in the province of Kwangtung, 50 miles east of Canton, since Sunday as a result of a flood of the Tung river, dispatches reported today. Only the city wall prevented complete submersion of the city, the report said.

3 MARINE CORPS FLIERS RESCUED IN JUNGLE

Bluefields, Nicaragua, Aug. 31 (AP)—Three U. S. marine corps airmen who crashed in a storm 60 miles west of Bluefields nine days ago en route from Managua, were rescued from the jungles today. They are Lieut. Clovis C. Coffman, Sergt. Walter E. Soofield and Corp. Raymond R. Townsend.

POSTMASTER PARKER OF FRAMINGHAM DIES

Framingham, Aug. 31 (AP)—Ralph H. Parker, for seven years postmaster, died today after a long illness. He formerly was connected with the New England Cold Storage Co. in Boston and the R. H. Long Co. here. He had been chairman of the Republican town committee.

LEEDS YACHT OFFICER JAILED FOR ABSENCE

Hamilton, Bermuda, Aug. 31 (AP)—Edgar Nicol, an officer aboard William D. Leeds, Jr., yacht Margo, was sentenced to seven days at hard labor today in the Hamilton police court for absenting himself from the yacht without permission.

Mother Sees Train Kill Her Little Hero Son

By WIN BROOKS

If there is a Valhalla for little boys, its 540 gates swung open today and the trumpets of the Valkyries were sounded for Burton Gross.

No Norse blood ran in his veins. He never heard of Odin. But he died as heroes die, with courage, sacrificing his life for another.

Burton was seven. His home was at 6 Harriett st., Brighton. He was killed by a Narrow Gauge train in Revere, sacrificing his life to save the life of his brother, Jerry, four. His mother saw him die.

TRAIN THAT DIDN'S STOP

With his mother, Mrs. Martin Gross, Jerry, and his sister, Ernestine, 3, he started to walk to Revere Beach this morning from the home of an aunt in Calumet st. They took a short cut to cross the railroad tracks below the wire fence at Revere st. station.

The three children ran ahead of Mrs. Gross.

"Be careful of the children crossing the tracks," Mrs. Gross called to Burton.

"All right, mama," he said.

The children reached the edge of the fence. A train could be seen approaching but they thought it would stop at the station. They didn't know it was the Boston-Lynn express.

THEN DEATH CAME

"Jerry, you wait here," Burton ordered.

He took Ernestine's hand and led her over the track.

"Ernestine, you stay there," he said.

He looked up. The train hadn't stopped at the station and it was rushing down on them. And Jerry was disregarding his orders and starting toward the rails.

"Jerry!" he shouted. "Get back Jerry!"

Mrs. Gross, some distance up the roadbed, still behind the fence, could do nothing . . . nothing but watch.

So Burton started back across the track to stop Jerry, and Jerry, seeing Burton, finally stood still—in the safety zone.

The six-car train passed over Burton. He was still breathing when they picked up his body, but by the time the ambulance arrived at Massachusetts General Hospital the gates of Valhalla had swung wide.

1100 IN ECLIPSE BOAT MISHAP

The Nantasket Line steamer Allerton, carrying 1100 passengers on a special excursion trip into the total eclipse area, struck a submerged log and became disabled, 300 feet off Rowes wharf this afternoon. The rudder was broken.

Capt. Elmer McFarland signalled ashore that he could not return under his own power and the tug Luna was sent out to push the steamer back to the wharf again.

Passengers were transferred from the Allerton to the Mayflower, another excursion boat of the same line, and, after a half-hour delay, the eclipse viewers set sail again.

SKIES CLEAR FOR VIEW OF ECLIPSE

Clouds Pass From Face of Sun as Moon Approaches on Totality Line

While 5,000,000 laymen and scientists in the totality area awaited uncertainly the weather's final decision, the skies over Maine and New Hampshire cleared considerably today an hour before the eclipse starting time of 3:23 p. m., daylight reckoning.

Half an hour before the moon's edge was due to make its "first contact" with the sun, the sky was almost entirely blue in the Conway district.

Skies were clearing also over Boston, although a fine sprinkle of rain had descended at 1:30 p. m. in the Hub, threatening to blot out Boston watchers' expected view of the eclipse in 99 per cent totality.

Throughout the earlier day the sun and clouds had played an "in again, out again" game, with the waiting scientists in the totality band in a state of nervous tension lest the major part of their long preparations go for naught.

BOSTON OVERCAST

Over Boston at noon the sky was still overcast, with only occasional patches of blue showing through the gray.

At Fryeburg, Me., in the totality belt, there was a thin, lacy scud of fog, with brief light showers, but with the sun peeping through at intervals.

At the tip edge of Cape Cod, a ross which the totality band stretches, there was a haze, but clearing weather as the day wore on was predicted.

The only group of scientists who have made long preparations to study the eclipse and who appeared "out of luck" for a certainty as the starting hour approached were scientists who picked locations on the high peaks of Presidential Range in the White Mountains.

MILLIONS AT SHOW

However, all Boston and New England, even in those sections where the clouds persisted, gazed skyward and hopefully for the long anticipated eclipse which has attracted millions of men and women to this northeast corner of the nation.

For a period two hours and 13 minutes in length, the moon's dark face will pass between the earth and the sun, casting on the earth a shadow that travels at the rate of 2000 miles an hour.

During that period more than 5,000,000 scientists and laymen, on the ground, in the air and out at sea, in the area of 100 per cent totality, will study and photograph various phenomena at a cost estimated at $1000 a second for the two hours and 13 minutes.

For Boston watchers the eclipse will begin at 3:23 p. m., daylight time, will reach its maximum totality at 4:33 p. m. for a brief 100 seconds and will end at 5:30 p. m.

LAST WORD ON DEBTS RESTS WITH MILLS

Secretary of Treasury Has Power to Make Secret Pact With Norman

By ROBERT BARRY

Washington, Aug. 30 (US)—A joker in the Mellon-Geddes debt settlement agreement signed June 18, 1923, gives Secretary of the Treasury Mills virtual plenipotentiary powers to negotiate a private understanding with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, as to payments of the British debts, it was learned today.

Thus the official admission made to the Hearst papers on Monday that Mr. Norman "will see or communicate with" Secretary Mills before he returns to London assumes the most vital importance.

NOTICE DUE SEPT. 15

Under the Mellon-Geddes agreement, which was negotiated by Stanley Baldwin, then Chancellor of the British Exchequer, and Montagu Norman, Great Britain is required to give notice on or before Sept. 15 if she does not intend to resume payments on Dec. 15.

There is no provision in the British budget for the payments due on Dec. 15.

Great Britain does not wish, however, to give the required 90-days notice of intention not to pay. To do so would constitute notice of intended default.

The purpose of the "gentlemen's agreement" at Lausanne was to force the United States to agree to cancellation or its equivalent and save the faces and the creditors of America's debtors.

MILLS CAN AID NORMAN

Since something must be done before Sept. 15, Washington can well understand Mr. Norman's anxiety to know this week from Mills, Ambassador Andrew W. Mel-

U. S. Taxpayers Demand Light On Norman's Visit

By B. C. FORBES

MONTAGU NORMAN, astute head of the Bank of England, has consistently and persistently for years aroused American suspicions, distrust and hostility by his hole-in-corner, mole-like activities during his repeated furtive visits to this country.

It cannot be denied that under-cover wire-pulling in high places has been extraordinarily successful—from his and the British viewpoint, if not quite so satisfactory from the viewpoint of the American taxpayer.

Therefore, his attitude may be, "I should worry."

Several years ago this writer wrote in this newspaper apropos of a Montagu Norman visit:

MONTAGU NORMAN

"Governor Benjamin Strong loves secrecy so much that he should be at the head, not of the largest Federal Reserve Bank in the country, but of the Federal Secret Service. Those of us who know him have become accustomed to his weakness for building Chinese walls about himself and foreign bankers visiting him, when approached for information of public interest . . . The writer has had many a bout with Ben Strong over his chronic policy of super-secrecy. But all in vain . . . The American public detest secrecy. They detest it when practised in business and they detest it still more when carried into public or quasi-public institutions . . . In this democracy public are absolutely right in condemning darkness and demanding light from those occupying the highest places."

NOW it transpires that Governor Strong's successor, Governor George L. Harrison, of the New York reserve bank, has been hypnotized by

STOCKS STEADY, RAILS HIGHER

New York, Aug. 31—The stock market in Wall St. recovered in afternoon trading today and the closing tone was steady. A flurry of selling at midday was absorbed and the market recovered under the leadership of the rails. Prices were mixed.

Delaware Lackawanna closed with a net gain of $6 a share after selling up $7. Delaware & Hudson finished with a gain of around a point. Atchison closed unchanged.

U. S. Steel was off about a point at its closing price, $46.12. Cotton, after a drop of about $1.50 a bale, came back to near its final prices of the previous day, and wheat stiffened somewhat, after losing more than a cent a bushel.

MAYOR TELLS HULTMAN HIS PROBE FAILS

Reveals He Put Detectives on the Welfare Frauds; Police Stand Pat on Charges

Picture on Page 14.

Mayor Curley today, facing Police Commissioner Hultman and other high police officials in his office at city hall, challenged section by section their report disclosing wholesale frauds in public aid, the contents of which were published exclusively in last Saturday's Boston Evening American.

The mayor and police commissioner clashed over several sections of the report, and the former bluntly told Commr. Hultman he was greatly disappointed in what the police reported.

The full board of overseers of the public welfare were present at the meeting and, in reply to questions of the mayor, hurled answers to the charges made by police, denying chiefly that they refused to co-operate in the investigation.

POLICE STAND PAT

The report of the police commissioner on the first 500 cases handed to Mayor Curley last night showed 206 undeserving cases, and numerous other irregularities, bearing out the exposure by the Evening America of widespread welfare racketeering.

Most of the questions that arose in the long discussion over the report in Mayor Curley's office today were left in the air—police officials adhering firmly to the stand taken by them in their report, and the welfare officials persisting in the opposite view.

At one point Mayor Curley, reviewing the continuous investigation of welfare matters which he said had been going on for three years, revealed that a short time ago he hired Burns detectives to investigate certain anonymous charges. The detectives made a negative report, he said.

The conference at City Hall was a surprise, being called suddenly by the mayor, who within an hour had the various officials present.

WHOLE INQUIRY STALLED

At the time of the conference it was evident that all proposed prosecution of fraud cases had stalled—neither the police, the law department nor the welfare department was making any moves toward prosecution.

The police claimed lack of neces-

HOOVER LOSES SOLID DRY SUPPORT IN BAY STATE

SPLIT IN RANKS LIKELY TO AID THIRD PARTY

Leader of Prohibitionists Assails Major Platforms, Sees Run Out by Hoover

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

The drys are split—125,000 of them in Massachusetts.

President Hoover is certain to lose the united support which backed him to a man four years ago.

"There is no reason for any dry man or woman, or any dry organization, to support either candidate for President on account of his dryness. Neither of them is dry," said Orville S. Poland today.

"To support Hoover for being 'dry' is either stupid or dishonest.

"Some drys will vote for Hoover because they are congenital Republicans and can't help themselves. Some will vote for him for economic reasons. Some will vote for him because they will be fooled by the dry bait he has held out to them on a hook.

"Some drys will go fishing on election day, because of the conviction that both Roosevelt and Hoover are wet.

BETRAYED BY HOOVER

"Some will vote for a third candidate—either Upshaw because he is known to be dry or Norman Thomas as a protest.

"Some will vote for Roosevelt, because they consider Hoover has betrayed them and should receive a positive reproval for his treachery.

"Let me tell you about this last reason: There are some pretty deep political principles apart from the dry cause or any other policy. Support your friends. Be generous to your enemies. NEVER SUPPORT ANYONE WHO HAS RUN OUT ON YOU."

Mr. Poland is the forefront of the Citizens Dry Campaign Committee of Massachusetts, with headquarters at 3 Joy st., Boston. This committee represents, in political matters, all Allied Forces, the Anti-Saloon League, the State Grange, the Law Enforcement League and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

G. O. P. PLANK "BAIT"

"The dry forces," said Mr. Poland, "will support the dry candidate for Congress and for the Legislature. On the Presidency, they will vote individually, as their consciences dictates. There can be no excuse for voting for Hoover as a dry, in my judgment, lest it be on the assumption that some ineptitude or some inconsistency in him would prevent him from carrying out his expressed policy on prohibition.

"Both Roosevelt and Hoover are wet, in the light of the ultimate objective. The only question is which one might mean the cocktail or schooner of beer first.

"You must understand that Wall St. (or call the big business interests by any name you will to identify them) want to get prohibition out of politics because some of the 'sons of wild jackasses' from the West have been elected by liberal and prohibition voters and these 'wild jackasses' have had a way of not obeying the commands and desires of Wall St., on legislation which has affected Wall Street's pocketbook. Prohibition has been the touchstone to many elections unsatisfactory to Wall st. and they want to get it out of the way, not so much because of prohibition but because it has happened to have affected their private political interests adversely at times."

CERMAK FLAYS 'DRY HEADS'

Paris, Aug. 31 (INS)—A vigorous attack on prohibitionists "with wet bellies and dry heads" was launched today by Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago in a speech before the Anglo-American Press Club.

"I know," he said, "that the prohibition law is being violated under the dome of the capitol in Washington. Most prohibitionists have wet bellies and dry heads.

"In 1919 there were 7552 saloons in Chicago, bringing in $10,000,000 a year in taxes. Prohibition costs Chicago $175,000,000.

"Our police force has been doubled. The city jail, which in 1919 had 505 prisoners, now has 2700. Joliet penitentiary had 1300 in 1919. Now it houses 2000. New Joliet prison has 3000 convicts. The Illinois reformatory, which had 300 inmates 13 years ago, now has 1100. Insane asylums are crowded to the doors.

"The income lost as a result of prohibition would equal the whole of America's income tax. I believe Congress as soon as it convenes will modify the law to permit 3 or 4 per cent beer."

Analysis of Nation-wide Poll By Hearst Newspapers on Presidential Candidates

Washington, Aug. 31 (US)—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Governor Roosevelt in the nationwide presidential poll of the Boston Evening American, in co-operation with all other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States. It also shows the majority that each candidate has in each state in which he is leading. In addition it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each state as compared with the last preceding report from the state. These state reports are usually a week apart.

The final feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each state where he has improved his position as compared with the preceding report from that state.

BLEASE IN RACE WITH OLD FOE

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 31 (AP)—Senator E. D. Smith and former Senator Cole L. Blease, once before political enemies, and once colleagues in the United States Senate, apparently will fight over again a battle they waged in 1914 for the Democratic senatorial nomination from South Carolina.

Smith, known to thousands as "Cotton Ed," and Blease, stormy petrel of South Carolina politics, led a field of four candidates in yesterday's primary. They will enter a second race two weeks hence to decide the nominee.

The vote from 1295 of the state's 1446 precincts was:

Smith, 86,150.
Blease, 72,810.

Ashton H. Williams, who advocates repeal of the 18th amendment, got 40,474 votes. Leon W. Harris, the only out and out dry in the race, received 37,184.

John C. Taylor of Anderson defeated Representative Fred H. Dominick, former law partner of Blease.

Rep. Thomas S. McMillan, of the first district, was renominated without opposition.

M'ADOO LEADS IN LANDSLIDE

San Francisco, Aug. 31 (AP)—A foe of prohibition, State Senator Taliant Tubbs led Senator Samuel Shortridge, resubmissionist and supporter of the Hoover administration, for the Republican senatorial nomination in returns today from Tuesday's primary.

Voting developed a landslide for William Gibbs McAdoo for the senatorial nomination on the Democratic slate.

In Los Angeles McAdoo issued a statement in which he said the result of the primary was "immensely gratifying to me because it is indicative of the strength of Roosevelt and Garner in California."

In 8891 precincts, some incomplete, out of 10,531 in the state, McAdoo registered 186,279 against 95,670 for Justus S. Wardell, San Francisco wet; 50,607 for the Rev Robert P. Shuler, militant dry of Los Angeles; 14,231 for Maurice M. McCarthy of Los Angeles; 10,787 for P. M. Abbott, a supporter of Alfred E. Smith in the presidential primary, and 6173 for Annie Riley Hale, writer and lecturer.

Tubbs had 176,329 in 8924 compared against 156,003 for Shortridge.

Special Escort for Hughes in Eclipse

Conway, N. H., Aug. 31 (AP)—Officers of the New Hampshire National Guard, on learning Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Charles Evans Hughes was in the vicinity of Mount Washington today to see the eclipse, despatched a captain to act as a personal escort. It was reported Justice Hughes would make the ascent by means of the cog railway.

The mountain has been enshrouded in heavy clouds for several days.

GOV. ROOSEVELT SHOWS GAINS IN 33 STATES

Net Advances for Hoover in 15, But He Carries Only 8 of These EXCLUSIVE!

By COLE E. MORGAN

Universal Service Correspondent

Washington, Aug. 31—Governor Roosevelt has scored net gains in 33 states and President Hoover in 15 in the additional returns tabulated during the last week in the nation-wide presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

The States where Hoover improved his position, with the net gain in each were:

HOOVER GAINS HERE

Colorado 46, Connecticut 268, Delaware 10, Indiana 64, Kansas 1, Maine 55, Massachusetts 415, Montana 12, New Hampshire 66, New Jersey 155, New York 154, Ohio 157, Pennsylvania 28, Rhode Island 92, Wyoming 4.

Roosevelt's net gains were in these States:

Alabama 110, Arizona 70, Arkansas 172, California 993, Florida 152, Georgia 287, Idaho 36, Illinois 541, Iowa 84, Kentucky 293, Louisiana 172, Maryland 440, Michigan 115, Minnesota 23, Mississippi 120, Missouri 259, Nebraska 109, Nevada 9, New Mexico 37, North Carolina 679, North Dakota 7, Oklahoma 228, Oregon 35, South Carolina 139, South Dakota 88, Tennessee 355, Texas 668, Utah 6, Vermont 11, Virginia 175, Washington 239, West Virginia 188, Wisconsin 705.

Although Hoover made gains in 15 States, only eight thus far are giving him a majority of the ballots recorded. They are the six New England States, Ohio and Kansas. The Ohio majority is only 13 and that in Kansas but 43, with approximately 4100 votes tabulated in the former and 2000 in the latter.

Roosevelt on the other hand is holding New Jersey by only 22 majority with more than 3000 votes recorded. This is a standoff for Hoover's thin margin in Ohio. In eight other states Roosevelt's lead is less than 100. They are Colorado, Delaware, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon and Wyoming.

NEW YORK DOUBTFUL

As a whole Hoover had the edge in today's additions. Outstanding was the inroad he made on Roosevelt's New York lead with new returns from the upstate region surrounding Albany. What yesterday was a 60-40 advantage in New York for Roosevelt was reduced today to a 51-49 division, placing the state in the doubtful zone.

Pennsylvania, with today's returns, also divided 51-49 in Roosevelt's favor. Yesterday the percentages showed this state standing 52-48 for Roosevelt.

A total of 6811 new ballots were counted. Hoover drew 3724 and Roosevelt 3087. These additions brought the total for the country as a whole to 115,926, dividing 70,356 for Roosevelt and 45,570 for Hoover. This is a Roosevelt majority of 24,786. The percentage stands 61-39 in Roosevelt's favor.

T. R. STAYS OUT OF CAMPAIGN

Manila, Aug. 31 (AP)—Governor-General Theodore Roosevelt today cancelled plans to participate in the Republican presidential campaign because of the press of official duties and advice from Washington that he remain here.

Announcement of the cancellation was made after Governor-General Roosevelt had received a cablegram from Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley saying President Hoover thought it best that he remain in the Philippine Islands.

For several weeks the insular legislature has been struggling to balance the budget and reorganize the government, and Mr. Roosevelt has indicated he was loth to leave under these conditions.

Eclipse Ruse Fails for Rum Suspect

Lowell, Aug. 31 (AP)—When federal agents called on Philip Cloutier today he excused himself to go out and look at the eclipse. Philip apparently had no intention of viewing the phenomenon from the immediate vicinity, for when the officers overtook him he was rapidly leaving the neighborhood. He was held for violating the liquor laws.

Boy Electrocuted by Lamp in Water

Dayton, O., Aug. 31 (AP)—Contact of an electric light with the water of a fish pond into which he had waded caused the death of Ivan Coates, 17, here last night. The youth's brother, Russell, witnessed the accident.

His Club Wins

David Cronin, Jr., Wellesley policeman, was badly beaten by Richard Leonard, Watertown, when Cronin attempted to place him under arrest after Leonard failed to explain his suspicious actions at the Newton Lower Falls railroad station early today. Leonard, who is 6 ft. 4, was getting the best of the struggle when Cronin led with his club. Ten hours later Leonard was still unconscious.

OFFICER CLUBS FIGHTING GIANT

A Wellesley policeman and a Watertown man engaged in a terrific struggle at the Wellesley side of the Newton Lower Falls rail road station early today.

Richard Leonard, 22, six feet, four inches tall, living on Rutland st., Watertown, was finally clubbed into submission by Patrolman David J. Cronin, Jr., and 10 hours after the battle he was still unconscious at Newton Hospital.

Patrolman Cronin also required hospital treatment for injuries to his ribs. Half of his uniform was torn from his body.

The policeman said he caught Leonard attempting to force the door of the station, where recently there have been several breaks.

"What are you doing here?" he demanded.

"What are YOU doing here?" was Leonard's reply as he dived at the officer.

Benjamin Murphy, who lives near the station, was aroused by the fight and telephoned the Wellesley police station. Patrolmen William Mullen and William McBurney responding. Leonard was unconscious and Cronin was semi-conscious when they reached the scene.

A warrant charging Leonard with assault on an officer was sworn out.

PICKETS SHOT IN FARM STRIKE; TROOPS ASKED

Shooting Follows a Tear-Gas Attack; Sheriffs Move to End Blockade

Cheroke, Ia., Aug. 31 (AP)—Sheriff Arthur N. Tilton of Cherokee County today said he was requesting Governor Turner to send the militia here, following the wounding early today of 14 farm strike pickets.

The pickets were wounded by shotgun fire from an unidentified automobile passing through the picket lines. Tear gas bombs had been tossed from the automobile preceding the shooting.

One deputy said it was reported the attackers were led by a man whose car had been stopped while returning from a funeral. The pickets are alleged to have thrown logs in front of the machine which crashed into the obstruction inflicting back injuries to one of the women occupants.

At Omaha, Neb., the authorities moved again today to end the blockade of the highways.

Omaha, focal point of the farmers' "war" during the early days of the movement, again became the scene of interest as Sheriff C. B. McDonald deployed 35 deputies on highways with the command that they do everything possible to enforce the law.

At Fort Dodge officials warned holiday workers that they had no lawful right to stop motorists on highways or to search automobiles or trucks for farm products.

In several sections of Iowa today there was a noticeable decline in picketing. In Cedar county, however, holiday leaders announced plans of putting 1000 pickets on the roads.

Near Sioux City, Ia., and Onawa, farmers were free today for the first time in two weeks to bring certain prescribed amounts and kinds of produce to market.

New York Farmer Urges Co-operative Union to Strike

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP)—A farm strike for New York State, similar to that prevailing in some western states, was proposed today by James W. Whitley, a Columbia County farmer who is president of the New York State Farmers' Co-operative Union.

Under his plan, Whitley said, an embargo would be placed on all farm products entering cities until higher prices result.

He proposed to start the strike on Friday in Mechanicville, Saratoga County, where his organization has a headquarters.

U. S. Taxpayers Demand Light On Norman's Visit

By B. C. FORBES

the governor of the Bank of England into acquiescing in this same utterly un-American, undemocratic, hole-in-corner pow-wowing.

Nor is Governor Harrison the only high American office-holder who has placed himself at the beck and call of this supremely clever international secret negotiator. No governmental official is too high to become a party to Montagu Norman's secret schemings—beg pardon, he is not Montagu Norman during this visit. He sailed and landed in the country as "Prof. Clarence Skinner." (The appropriateness of this name presumably appealed to the gentleman choosing it.)

Mr. Norman, alias Prof. Skinner, may be beyond the reach of American public opinion. But those who become his cat's-paws are NOT.

The published pretence that Mr. Norman, alias Prof. Skinner, embarked for America for the benefit of his health is altogether too flimsy, too transparent, too incredible, in view of his past performances and in view of his ceaseless activities—always under cover—since his arrival. New York, Boston, Washington have never—until now—been favored health resorts for Londoners.

• • •

THE visit of Mr. Norman, alias Prof. Skinner, is likely to prove quite healthy, thank you, for British finance, for British taxpayers' pockets. But it is hardly likely to prove equally healthy for American taxpayers.

Secretary of the Treasury Mills, Governor Harrison and other public officials owe to themselves and to the American public a clear-cut, unevasive statement explaining Mr. Norman's (alias Prof. Skinner's) overtures and objectives.

If Mr. Norman, alias Prof. Skinner, has nothing to hide, why hide it?

If he does have something to hide, American taxpayers are warranted in demanding that their officials refuse to become his muzzled, pliant tools.

John Wanamakers Plan to Spend Year in Reno

Los Angeles, Aug. 31—Mrs. Elizabeth Peltz Warburton Wanamaker, bride of two weeks of Capt. John Wanamaker, New York and Philadelphia store magnate, today revealed that she and her husband will live "most of the year" in Reno, where they were married.

Mrs. Wanamaker

She also disclosed that her husband is now interested in numerous mining projects in California and Nevada.

Ortiz Rubio Spikes Rumors He Will Quit in Mexico

Mexico City, Aug. 31 (US)—President Ortiz Rubio today spiked rumors that he had resigned or intended to resign because of differences with Plutarco Elias Calles, former president and recently war minister in Ortiz Rubio's cabinet.

President Ortiz Rubio

Through his secretary the President issued an official denial. It said:

"The President and General Calles continue to work in perfect harmony and with the good friendship they have always had for each other."

'MA' FERGUSON LEADS BY 2042

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 31 (INS)—Miriam A. (Ma) Ferguson, Texas' first and only woman governor, today apparently had won the Democratic nomination over Gov. Ross Shaw Sterling, incumbent, in the closest contest in the state's history.

Revised returns from Saturday's run-off primary from 254 counties including 247 complete, give Mrs. Ferguson a lead of 1965. Totals were:

Mrs. Ferguson 475,756.
Gov. Sterling 473,714.

It was estimated less than 2000 votes remained to be counted.

After the official count by county committees and the State Democratic Committee, looms the possibility of a court contest, predicted by many observers.

ROOSEVELT ON AIR SATURDAY

Bridgeport, Ct., Aug. 31 (INS)—An escort of state police, headed by Commissioner Anthony Sunderland, will meet Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, and his party at the Massachusetts state line at Canaan Saturday afternoon for the motor trip to this city where the Governor will speak Saturday night.

The nominee will be driven through the towns of Kent, New Milford, and Newton.

At night, after a reception at the home of National Committeeman Archibald McNeil at Black Rock, Roosevelt will speak at Pleasure Beach at a testimonial dinner in McNeil's honor. Arrangements were completed today for a radio broadcast of the speaking program.

Mrs. Roosevelt will accompany the Governor.

STORY OF $50,000 FOR FAY PACK OF LIES, SAYS RUDY

SETTLEMENTS DISCLAIMED BY CROONER

Vallee's Attorney Joins in the Denunciation of $1000 a Month Alimony Pact

It may be that Rudy Vallee has agreed to give Fay Webb Vallee $50,000 cash, half of the $50,000 Vallee home in Hollywood, and $1000 a month alimony for life, but:

"It's all a pack of lies," Rudy declared here today during his orchestra tour.

And:

"It's manufactured out of whole cloth," stated Former Magistrate Hyman Bushel, attorney for both Rudy and his mate, in New York. "There has been no settlement agreed upon or suggested, of such figures or any other."

FORTUNE SET AT $2,000,000

These were the responses to published reports that these sums had been decided upon at a conference between Rudy, his wife and their lawyers shortly before the crooner left New York last week on his New England tour.

It was said in the reports that Mrs. Vallee wanted much more than an initial settlement of $50,000, owing to Rudy's accumulation of more than $2,000,000 during his wave of popularity, but that she accepted the sum when Rudy explained his overhead was high and there were many persons to pay off.

There was some argument also, rumor had it concerning the $1000 alimony. Rudy, it was said, pointed out that when his popularity waned this amount might become a strain too great for his pocketbook.

But, the report continued, the lawyers and Mrs. Vallee agreed to talk of reduction of the alimony when the depression arrives for Rudy and saw no reason why it coldn't remain at that sum now. Rudy agreed finally, the reports said.

CONFERENCE TOMORROW

Meanwhile, there is to be a conference between Vallee and Atty. Bushel tomorrow when the singer returns to New York. Whether the languorous Fay will be present has not yet been decided.

There is no denial that on Friday the wife of the crooner plans to start west, presumably for Reno, to begin divorce procedings.

Fay, with her mother and father, who is police chief of Santa Monica, Cal., are still at the Vallee apartment on Central Park West, New York. There, too, yesterday came the greatest rush of fan mail that has been addressed to Rudy on any single day since his marriage, 13 months ago.

Girls, and women old enough to have outgrown such enthusiasm, parade in a constant stream by the Vallee apartment, peering futilely for a glimpse of either the singer or his wife.

Some woman admirer has sent daily a great bunch of seasonal flowers, addressed to Rudy, and with no other identification than the card "from one who admires you from afar."

OYSTERS GIVE WORK TO 20,000

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Oysters "R" in reason, or will be beginning tomorrow and continuing throughout each succeeding month that is spelled with an "R" in it, and this means, it was stated today, that 20 000 additional men will be put back to work.

William H. Raye, president of Bluepoints Co., Inc., a subsidiary of General Foods Corp., said that about 70,000 persons are employed in the industry the year around. When oysters are in season, this figure is increased to 90,000.

Oysters, he said, are found along every costal state in the country except Maine and New Hampshire. The value of the oyster crop for 1932 was estimated at $18,000,000. It shares with the salmon industry the distinction of being the nation's most valuable under water crop.

ELY POWERLESS IN TAX FIGHT

Medford's tax dificulties were aired in the office of Gov. Ely today with a visit of women taxpayers to protest a rise of $6.40 in that city's rate.

The committee of six was led by Mrs. E-elyn Bracy who has been a leader in protest meetings.

After the 40-minute conference Gov. Ely said he told the women he could nothing about the situation without a special session of the Legislature.

"It is a concrete example of the situation which I called to public atention some time ago," Gov. Ely said.

"The women were greatly disturbed, and rightly so, but there is nothing I can do without legislation."

2 ARRESTED IN MAD FLIGHT ON BUNKER HILL

Third Youth Gets Away From the Wrecked Car; One Is Caught in Relief Hospital

A chase over the Charlestown "loop" ended in two thrilling captures of youths today, but a third escaped through back yards. One youth jumped into the Little Mystic river in an attempt to swim to freedom but was caught.

The trio appeared at Medford and Bunker Hill sts. in a car that had been stolen from Bridge st., Cambridge.

The car roared over Bunker Hill st., with Patrolmen Conroy and McGovern in pursuit. It then cut back into Medford st., and turned over at a sharp turn.

The three boys scattered, one plunging into the river, but he was captured on the opposite side by George Capen of Hancock st., Charlestown.

The youth gave his name as Joseph E. Doherty, 16, of Lexington st., Charlestown.

Capen's brother, Willard, of Mystic st., Charlestown, was instrumental in the other capture. He took part in the chase with his brother and suffered cuts when he fell.

At Haymarket Relief Hospital, with Patrolman Frank Conlon, Capen noticed a youth being treated for cuts and pointed him out to Conlon as one of the two who escaped.

According to Conlon the youth admitted he was in the car and gave his name as Foster Parsons of Monument sq., Charlestown.

Both youths, and a third the police expect to arrest shortly, face charges of larceny of the car.

MELLON LINKED WITH VISIT OF NORMAN

By SEYMOUR BERKSON
Universal Service

New York, Aug. 31—The mysterious figure of Montagu Norman, governor of the bank of England, hovered over financial parleys in Wall St. yesterday, participated in by Secretary of Treasury Ogden L. Mills and Andrew W. Mellon, ambassador to England.

The movements of Secretary Mills and Ambassador Mellon were guarded with almost as much secrecy as the gray-bearded governor of England's most important financial institution has sought to maintain about the purpose of his visit to this country incognito under the pseudonym of "Professor Clarence Skinner."

MELLON HOLDS SILENCE

But is was definitely ascertained that after Mills and Mellon arrived from Washington, the Secretary of Treasury proceeded to the Federal Reserve Bank headquarters here where Mr. Norman conferred at length Saturday.

Later, the gray-haired ambassador to England, who several months ago celebrated his 78th birthday, emerged from his hotel, stepped briskly into his Rolls Royce limousine and directed his chauffeur to drive "to Wall St."

There Mellon went to the office of William H. Woodin, a director of the Federal Reserve Bank as well as president of the American Car & Foundry Co., and leading financier.

Neither would discuss what took place during the three hours they spent together in Woodin's office. Mellon also conferred during the day with officers of the National City Bank.

The financial district was abuzz with various rumors or impending developments of significance in international finance but the nature of whatever connection the visit of Mills and Mellon here had with that of Norman was not disclosed.

NEW LOAN HINTED

It is believed however to be closely linked to efforts to obtain a moratorium from the United States on war debts owed by England" and an alternate suggestion that the American bankers might loan Great Britain $3,500,000,000 to liquidate war debts.

The British financier conferred during his visit to New York Saturday with George Leslie Harrison, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

Harrison said after their conference that they had discussed a number of subjects of international finance but that the visit was just a "courtesy call" and had nothing to do with any specific proposals related to war debts or a British loan.

Norman himself returned Sunday to Bar Harbor, Me., his original "hideaway" under the incognito of "Professor Skinner," and there he remained—in careful seclusion—as the guest of Mrs. John Markoe, Philadelphia society matron.

MILLS ADMITS CONFERENCE

Secretary of Treasury Mills reached at his New York office admitted that he had conferred at the Federal Reserve Bank here, but denied emphatically it had any connection with Norman's visit there Saturday.

He declared:

"My visit to the bank had to do with government financing and not with Mr. Norman. I'm here primarily on private business and to watch my horse Blenheim race out at Saratoga track this week.'

And then the Secretary of the Treasury added:

"There wouldn't be so much talk about Mr. Norman's visit to this country if there weren't a political campaign underway. While I was at the Federal Reserve Bank, Norman was 400 miles away at Bar Harbor, Me."

Mr. Norman probably has seen Mr. Mellon and undoubtedly will see Secretary Mills. Still it must be remembered that it is only actually necessary for Mr. Norman to see and come to an agreement with the House of Morgan, since the Morgan firm is the fiscal agent of the British Empire and has almost complete control of the Hoover administration, being particularly influential with Secretary Mills and Ambassador Mellon.

MELLON ON FRIENDLY VISIT

Secretary Mills said he had not seen Norman and has made no appointment to see him but did not deny that he may see the British financier before the latter leaves.

Ambassador Mellon interviewed after his visit to Wall Street said he had gone there to 'see some friends" and that his visit to Mr. Woodin's office was 'purely personal."

He declined to discuss the nature of his conference in the financial district but denied it had any connection with Norman's presence in the United States. The ambassador admitted he had conferred with Norman in England before sailing for the United States but said he had no knowledge at that time that Norman was coming to this country. Mellon said he will sail for England today on the Olympic.

Norman has not indicated when he intends to return, but probably will not return until he has the moratorium and debt cancellation satisfactorily settled.

ENGLAND TO ASK REVISION AFTER ELECTION

By WILLIAM HILLMAN
(Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.)

London, Aug. 31—Montagu Norman's visit to the United States is in the nature of a "private and unofficial" investigation in preparation for a DRASTIC REDUCTION OF WAR DEBTS to be asked of the United States by her European debtors IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS.

This can be safely asserted today on the basis of information obtained from a high British authority who took part in the Lausanne conference where Germany's reparations payments were provisionally written down to one cent on the dollar.

PARLEY IN DANGER

This authority declared that the world economic conference scheduled to be held after the American elections, is doomed to failure unless a war debts settlement with the United States is effected either before the conference opens or before the sessions get down to serious business.

It is here that the provisional nature of the reparations agreement becomes doubly apparent. It was contingent upon war debt concessions from the United States.

Nothing definite regarding international commodity prices and currency questions can be achieved at the world economic conference, the authority stated, UNTIL THE UNITED STATES DEFINITELY REVISES WAR DEBTS, since Europe insists that all economic and currency questions are to be discussed at the parley are dependent upon the future disposition of gold transfers and the status of international indebtedness.

NORMAN'S VISIT CLEAR

Immediately after the elections, Europe intends losing no time in making official application to Washington for SCALING DOWN OF WAR DEBTS.

Viewed in this light, the mysterious arrival in the United States of the governor of the bank of England is explained. He is in the United States to prepare the way for discussing war debts reduction, despite America's ban on raising of this topic at he world economic conference.

It is regarded here as vital that the subject be met and decided upon OUTSIDE THE CONFERENCE previous to its convening and possibly during its sessions.

High banking circles close to the Bank of England today admitted that Norman intends to see important "government financial officials" as well as financiers while in the United States.

This was one comment available upon Universal Service's Washington dispatch disclosing that Norman would see or communicate with Secretary of the Treasury Mills before returning to England.

Bank of England quarters refused any comment whatsoever.

London Paper Sees Danger in Norman's Secret Mission

London, Aug. 31 (AP)—The anti-government Labor-Socialist Herald, which has been a consistent opponent of the present status of the Bank of England and stands for its nationalization, today strongly attacks Montagu Norman's supposed activities in the United States.

The paper declared the visit of the governor of the Bank of England was a dangerous example of secret diplomacy.

The Herald added that Norman was "discussing major financial problems including currency stabilization, and price levels," and demands to know whether the governor "is safeguarding the private interests of the Bank of England or representing the interests of the nation, and if the latter who gave him the authority, and to what is he committing Great Britain in secret talks in New York."

The paper insisted that nobody believes the "semi-inspired reports that Mr Norman's conferences mean nothing," and expressed fear that he might be maneuvering for an early return of the gold standard which "would be fatal."

The editorial, headed "Silly Secrecy," states:

"Professor Clarence Skinner, otherwise Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, has been conferring with American bankers on the economic conference and other matters under melodramatic conditions of secrecy.

HUSH HUSH MISSION

"Home Secretary Samuel is also engaged in a hush-hush mission in the Channel Isles. He too is talking about the economic conference with Premier Herriot of France.

"In both cases there have been semi-inspired reports that the conferences mean nothing. Nobody believes these reports. But the government's methods of publicity are at least consistent. It treats the British public as a child needing constant doses of soothing syrup. Candor in Whitehall would be a refreshing change.

"Sir John Simon has already announced a revival of the Anglo-French entente. Sir Herbert Samuel is preparing the way for a possible 'gentlemen's agreement 'with France to present to the world economic conference.

"Grave fears are being expressed in financial circles at the recrudescence of methods of 'secret diplomacy' and the effect which this may have on other countries represented at the world conference.

DANGER IN VISIT

"Norman's American visit is even more dangerous. People on both sides of the Atlantic are getting tired of his theatrical pretentiousness. The question is being asked in the city by important financial houses not in 'the ring' as to whom Norman is really representing.

"In his role as Prof. Clarence Skinner and governor of the Bank of England, he is discussing major financial problems, including currency stabilization and price levels. He has had frequent talks with Governor Harrison of the Federal Reserve Bank on these topics in preparation for the world economic conference.

"Is Norman safeguarding the private interests of the Bank of England or is he representing the wider interests of the nation?

"If the latter, then financial political circles want to know who gave him the authority and to what he is committing Great Britain in his secret talks in New York counting houses.

RESULTS FEARED

"It is now notorious that there have been wide divergencies between the Treasury and the Bank of England over early return to the gold standard. Norman wants an early return to the gold standard and the Treasury wants 'to wait and see.'

"City opinion is nervous about whether Norman is 'playing his own hand,' as he has done so often, to the cost of the country, or whether he is representing the prevailing British view ha a precipitate return to the gold standard woul dhe fatal.

"Disastrous results have so frequently followed Norman's mysterious voyages that this grave disquiet is amply justified.

'Meanwhile the atmosphere of mystery with which he surrounds himself makes it extremely difficult to obtain information on Norman's movements."

French Press Sees Violation of Gentleman's Pact

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, JR.

Paris, Aug. 31 (US)—Prime Minister MacDonald sent Montagu Norman, president of the Bank of England, to the United States to begin British war debt negotiations independent of France, the Nationalist newspaper, Figaro, declares.

Figaro attacks MacDonald for launching a maneuver contrary to the "gentlemen's agreement" at Lausanne and the subsequent Anglo-French accord of confidence.

French newspapers continue to manifest keenest interest in Norman's mysterious doings in America. They publish all reports and denials issuing from Washington, New York and London. Echo De Paris remarks:

"In the American press there is general criticism of Norman's secret visit."

Marlene Dietrich's Husband Stricken

Paris, Aug. 31 (INS)—Rudolph Seiber, husband of Marlene Dietrich, German film star, was taken to the American hospital today.

He was stricken at the Paramount studio in Joinville, with what physicians believed to be an attack of appendicitis.

MILLS TO HAVE LAST WORD IN WAR DEBTS

ion, federal reserve bank officials and J. P. Morgan & Co., what the Hoover administration is going to do.

It is possible for Secretary Mills to give Mr. Norman an assurance whereby the September 15 notice would not be necessary, the British government saved from any default and the policy of the Hoover administration kept secret from the American taxpayers until after the presidential election.

1—"ANY NOTICE, REQUEST OR CONSENT UNDER THE HAND OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY of the United States shall be deemed and taken as notice, request or CONSENT OF THE UNITED STATES."

That gives Mills enormous, sweeping authority. It makes the Secretary of the Treasury the government.

2—"THE UNITED STATES IN ITS DISCRETION MAY WAIVE ANY NOTICE REQUIRED HEREUNDER, but any such waiver shall be in writing and shall not extend to or affect any subsequent notice or impair any right of the United States to require notice hereunder."

The authority is carried in a "joker" in the Mellon-Geddes agreement. The final paragraph of that agreement carries two far-reaching provisions:

COULD WAIVE NOTICE

MILLS, THEREFORE, COULD WAIVE THE REQUIRED NOTICE OF ANTICIPATED NON-PAYMENT. He would have to grant the waiver to Great Britain in writing but there is nothing in the agreement nor in the act of Congress requiring him to tell the American people he had done so, at least, UNTIL AFTER THE NOVEMBER ELECTIONS.

Should the Mills-Mellon-Norman activities result in some such makeshift arrangement to cloak in secrecy the policy of the Hoover administration for DRASTIC DEBT REDUCTIONS OR OUTRIGHT CANCELLATION until after the November elections, it was pointed out today, any such secret agreement would give THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT, J. P. Morgan & Co., and other international bankers a new and even stronger and DIRECT INTEREST IN THE RE-ELECTION OF PRESIDENT HOOVER.

To have any such secret agreement stick it would be imperative that the Hoover administration be RETAINED IN POWER in order to guarantee fulfillment. Otherwise, Congress would be certain to cast out any such proposal and leave a free hand to the Roosevelt administration, which is pledged to have no traffic with the cancellationists.

An outstanding BARGAIN in White's great September Sale of Housewares

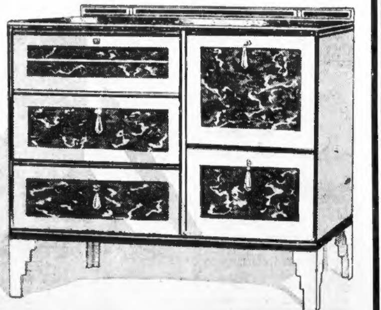
Famous make table top gas ranges

$49.50

regularly $69.50

Robertshaw heat control
Fully insulated

And you may buy yours on White's Convenient Payment Plan . . . . a small down payment and the balance in monthly installments.



It took the combined purchasing power of White's and another great associated store to get these ranges to sell for any such low price as $49.50. In order to do it, we had to buy the entire output of this famous maker whose name is a household word altho we have promised not to use it. The ranges themselves, as you may see by the illustration, are the popular table-top type, sell regularly for $20 higher than our sale price, have a green, marbleized porcelain enamel finish with old ivory porcelain enamel trimming and include practically every fine, modern improvement you might mention. All in all, the sort of stove one never dreams of being able to afford at such a low price, made easier than ever to pay by White's Convenient Payment Plan.

DEATH WARRANT FACES GERMAN REICHSTAG

Berlin, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Junker Chancellor, Franz von Papen, returned to the capital today with a blanket death warrant for the new Reichstag, and permission to use it the minute the government's economic program is threatened.

The warrant is an emergency decree signed without date of President von Hindenburg.

The Chancellor came back from Neudeck, East Prussia, to confer with the cabinet on his economic program, which contemplates risking more than $500,000,000 in tax refunds on the imminent return of prosperity. Employment would be furnished nearly 2,000,000 if the plan were utilized completely.

STANDS OFF GOERING

To stave off dissolution and neutralize the chancellor's talks with the President, the newly elected Nazi president of the Reichstag, Herman Wilhelm Goering, telegraphed for an immediate audience with the chief executive.

Hindenburg replied that he would prefer to see Goering next week, after returning from Neudeck.

Goering adjourned the Reichstag, organized yesterday, until it should be called, possibly next Saturday. The new Prussian Landtag was adjourned until Sept. 29.

VON PAPEN HOLDS REIN

Indications in parliamentary circles today seemed to point to at least a little longer life for the Reichstag. The newspaper Zwoelfuhrblatt intimated Adolf Hitler's Nazis and Centrists were unwilling to give Von Papen a chance immediately to apply his dissolution order.

If this were correct, an adjournment probably would follow the chancellor's keynote speech at the next session.

Political circles professed to see in Hindenburg's refusal to see Goering until next week a further studied gesture that the President and cabinet are running the country, and that others must wait until the chief executive has time for them.

5 MILLS ON DAY AND NIGHT SHIFT

North Adams, Aug. 31 (AP)—Five mills representing four different types of industry are now on night and day schedules a survey today showed.

Plants representing two other lines are on full time and a 25 per cent increase in business in the past two weeks was reported in still another field.

Sprague Specialties Company, radio condenser manufacturers, have gone from a three days a week basis with a curtailed force to a five-day week with 300 hands in the past two weeks as business multiplied two and one-half times.

The Arnold & Windsor print works each have extra shifts in their textile departments. The Blackinton woolen mill is running 60 per cent of its plant night and day.

The Greylock mills, cotton manufacturers, have called in double shifts in the North Adams and Williamstown plants. The Hoosac Marble Co. reported it had enough orders to run overtime for the rest of the year.

Wall-Streeter Shoe Co. and the H. W. Clark Biscuit Co. each reported full-time operation.

WALKER LIKELY TO ASK DELAY

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 31 (AP)—Because of the illness of Mayor James J. Walker, the date for resumption of the ouster case against the New York mayor was uncertain today.

At New York Mayor Walker was in bed suffering from nervous exhaustion, and his secretary, George S. Collins, said his illness might cause him to seek a further postponement of the hearing. Governor Roosevelt last Monday adjourned the hearing until Friday afternoon because of the death of George F. Walker, the mayor's brother.

Governor Roosevelt leaves in a little less than two weeks for his 8000-mile western tour, from which he will return October 3.

Disabled Fisherman in Tow of Cutter

New London, Ct., Aug. 31 (INS)—The coast guard cutter Cayuga reported to Section Base 4 today she had the fishing steamer Wanderer in tow and was proceeding with her to Boston via Nanset Beach.

Reports that the Wanderer was disabled sent the cutter Acushnet and destroyer Davis to her assistance. They were recalled when the Cayuga radio was received.

W. C. T. U. in Attack on Repeal Policy

Washington Aug. 31 (AP)—The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union said in a statement today that Franklin D. Roosevelt's prohibition repeal policy "constitutes a surrender to the lower powers."

Flying Family Is Greeted by Labrador Eskimos

Safely landed at Hopedale, Labrador, after completing the third leg of the flying family's air jaunt to Europe, Mrs. Blanche Hutchinson radios her story of the flight, exclusively to International News Service through the American Radio News Corporation, Station WRH.

By MRS. B. HUTCHINSON

Copyright, 1932, by International News Service

Hopedale, Labrador, Aug. 31—We landed safely here yesterday at 2:30 p. m., Atlantic standard time, after a rough trip from Port Menier, Anticosti Island, in the Gulf of the St. Lawrence, whence we took off at 10:05 a. m., making the 426-mile hop in a little more than four hours.

We plan to go on to Nain, Labrador, only 96 miles away, today.

We followed the direct route from Port Menier through scattered clouds and against strong headwinds as we passed over thousands of lakes and dense woodlands.

MEET ESKIMOS

When we landed we were greeted by Father Perett, the Moravian missionary, as many Eskimos rowed out in their kayaks to welcome us.

Hopedale is very picturesque. We were upon edge until we sighted the settlement, because the country was so desolate, but we made a perfect landing on glassy water sheltered by the mass of islands which dot the shoreline.

Yeserday, it so happened, registered the highest temperature on record here.

We have no worries. Many radiograms awaited us here.

Despite the heat, we were more than pleased by the fair weather.

It seemed almost too good to be true when we awoke yesterday to find the rain had stopped after five days.

ESCORTED BY GEESE

I think the entire population of Anticosti Island was on hand to see us off. Kathryn and Janet Lee were near tears at the thought of leaving their new-found playmates, the children of the French Canadian lumbermen. But they were all right once we were in the air.

As our plane lifted from the water of Ellis bay a flock of hundreds of Canadian geese rose as though in greeting.

It was the final touch to a perfect visit on the island, where our host, C. P. Townsend, extended us the hospitality of all of Anticosti.

CHINESE REBELS BATTLE JAPS

Mukden, Manchuria, Aug. 31 (INS)—Fierce fighting between a large invading force of insurgents and Japanese troops broke out today at Menchihu, important city on the Mukden-Antung railway, in the midst of the coal and iron fields of Liaoning Province.

The battle began in the morning and raged for hours, and nearly every building along the border between the Chinese and Japanese sections of the city burst into flames.

Casualties on both sides were believed to have been heavy.

O, la, la, la! Police of Chicago Prance Gaily in Opera

Chicago, Aug. 31 (AP)—Versatile, are these Chicago policemen.

When they're not chasing traffic law violators they go in for opera.

A corps of the city's mounted will participate tonight in Verdi's "Il Trovatore," the second performance of Chicago's outdoor opera. They'll appear as gypsies, and later as troops of the Count of Luna.

The policemen got their initial operatic experience when "Aida" was given recently. Then they rode their mounts onto the stage as Egyptian nobles.

Wales Coast Watched for Missing Fliers

Carnarvon, Wales, Aug. 31 (AP)—Authorities here are keeping a close watch along the North Wales coast and at Cardigan Bay for possible traces of the missing transatlantic fliers, Clyde Lee and John Bochkon, as a consequence of a report that an airplane motor had been heard on the night they were due over England.

Lee and Bochkon took off from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, Aug. 24.

HOME BANK HAS BILLION CREDIT

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—Chairman Franklin W. Fort of the Home Loan Board today estimated the maximum potential credit possibilities of the Home Loan Bank system at $1,600,000,000, but said the practical potential possibilities range from $1,000,000,000 to $1,250,000,000.

Fort explained that the system comprising twelve blanks with total capitalization of $134,000,000 could obtain additional funds through the issuance of debentures by the board.

STARS TO HONOR MARION DAVIES

New York, Aug. 31—An unusual tribute to Marion Davies and her new picture, "Blondie of the Follies," will be paid by famous stars and beauties of former Follies at the New York Premiere of the picture at the Capitol Theater tomorrow evening.

Headed by Helen Morgan, Ruth Etting and Peggy Fears, a delegation of "Glorified" girls will attend the opening in a body, occupying the State box at the Capitol. In addition to Helen Morgan, Ruth Etting and Peggy Fears, others who will attend include Lilyan Tashman, Ethel Shutta, Evelyn Groves, Neva Lynn, Virginia and Meredith Howard, Betty Dumbris, Mary Alice Rice, Norma Terriss and Joan Burgess.

Another tribute to Miss Davis and "Blondie of the Follies" will be paid by Maj. Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol, and famous radio broadcaster of the Capitol Family Hour, who, in his program on next Sunday will include the theme song from "Blondie of the Follies," "Why Don't You Take Me?" The number will be played by the orchestra under the direction of Yasha Bunchuk.

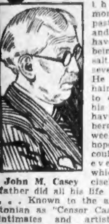
THEATER LOSES in Retirement of John Casey

Louella O. Parsons on HOLLYWOOD NEWS

Girl About Town

By ALYCE SIEMENS

Tom Thumb Miniature:



John M. Casey

JOHN M. CASEY—An Irish gentleman and musical artist at heart, who has been yes-ing and no-ing Hub theatricals' morals for the past 28 years and who would have preferred being an old salt sailing the seven seas! . . . He dislikes his hair's tendency to curl and all his life has been having it barbered every two weeks with fond hopes that he could uncurl it eventually—which was precisely what his father did all his life before that! . . . Known to the average Bostonian as "Censor Casey"; to his intimates and artists of the theatre, who wish to please him by giving him his official title, Chief of the Licensing Bureau of Boston, and to "ham" actors, who lack the intelligence to understand that it is not Casey, the man, who governs their stage deportment—but Casey the city official . . . John Casey is a good-natured, kindly, broadminded human being and not a howling goblin of do's and don'ts! . . . He's slim, about five feet nine inches in height, weighing about 139 pounds . . . The most he ever weighed in his whole life! . . . His face is long and resembles what you'll expect Charlie Chaplin to look like when he reaches Mr. Casey's age . . . His hair is pure white, soft and thin on top of his head . . . With cunning, thick tufts right over his ears . . . He parts it in the middle and sweeps it back . . . in the elegant style of the 90's . . . His hair was jet black until he lost his right arm in an accident, and then it turned white in less than a year!

As We See Him:

His eyes are soft, gray ones . . . His small mouth carries a thick, stubby mustache on the upper lip . . . With a gold tooth prominent in his lower jaw . . . Wears horn-rimmed glasses . . . Size seven hat . . . Which he always buys himself . . . Dislikes carrying an umbrella because it's too tiresome, not being able to switch hands! . . . Smokes six or seven cigars a day . . . Has "never smoked a whole bunch of cigarettes" yet . . . Smokes a pipe at his desk . . . Drinks liquor rarely, only for medicinal purposes . . . Because he doesn't care about it . . . Hardly ever drinks more than a half cup of tea or coffee at one meal . . . His favorite dish is "a good lobster salad or a good clam chowder made by Mrs. Casey . . . Loathes being idle . . . Enjoys working . . .

Half Hour Ashore!

He adores being on a boat . . . Has made every coast trip there is to make, during his vacation days . . . On his last trip to Honduras, in 15 days he was only off his boat for half an hour . . . Then because he HAD to search for tobacco for his pipe and not to snoop in theaters! . . . Is an excellent sailor . . . So is his wife, which makes it pretty swell for Censor Casey . . . He eats more on a boat trip—and holds it—than in six months on land—because he's thoroughly relaxed as soon as the anchor is up . . . Where he knows he cannot get off and no one can telephone him . . . Had to sell a camp in the woods because he was always being hailed back to his city desk!

Boudoir Secrets Out!

Censor Casey wears both parts of his pajamas when he's sleeping . . . That is, when he finally gets into them! . . . He sleeps always on a pillow, never reads in bed . . . Wears same weight night clothing and blankets year 'round . . . "I'm still red blooded," says he . . . Eats a bird-like breakfast, if any . . . Works in his City Hall office from 9:15 a. m. until 5 p. m. . . . And attends the theater four nights a week and has never entered them by the back door route . . . Always wanted theater folks to know he was "in the house" . . . Never had much time to read anything except theater literature trying to keep abreast of the imes . . .

Sad About Retiring Nov. 1—

Is John M. Casey . . . He regrets most of all losing the contact he's had with the theater managers of Boston . . . Regrets losing their whole hearted co-operation that has been his joy with them . . . When he has a night off he prefers, for his own amusement, grand opera or a symphonic program . . . Always feels very sad when he hears anything played from "Faust" . . . Since that was the last music he played . . . At the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, when he was on his last disastrous tour with a local Oratorio company . . . He lost his right arm in an accident on a train . . . For 21 years he'd studied music . . . Percussion instruments, timpani and drums . . . Before he received his appointment in the licensing department . . . When he lost his arm in 1902 . . . Was very sad about it . . . Turned to another instinct of refinement . . . Growth and sale of flowers . . . Finally, in 1904, he entered City Hall as a messenger . . . Three months later, Mayor Collins gave him his appointment, feeling that his 21 years of theatrical foundation well fitted him for the office . . . And also because his father and Mr. Casey's used to be upholsterers, who worked side by side at their benches . . . And now after all these years, Mr. Casey will soon lock the key in his tidy desk for the last time . . . And doesn't know precisely what he'll do with all his spare time—but he thinks he'll "sail on some water or other!" . . . The old salt still creeping out in him!

Long Work Boon to Stage

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

With much less than his usual flourish, John M. Casey steps out of the job generally referred to as public censor. This is bad news for the theaters, for Mr. Casey was more helpful than censorial. In the service of the drama Mr. Casey lost an arm; he was, perhaps, the best man at traps and drums in the whole field of the wandering minstrel, of which he was one. A railroad wreck, a couple of upturned Pullmans, and this wandering minstrel finally landed back in Boston with a good writing hand, while the other was strewn all over Pennsylvania landscape.

* * *

In the usual order of things, besides being a good Democrat and a deserving one, Mayor Patrick A. Collins established a department of Public Relations between eager showmen and the strict laws of the city and the state — especially the city. Whereupon Mr. John M. Casey became chief of the Bureau of Licenses. That, in the beginning, made him a full fledged, practical censor with a union card and all the glittering regalia that goes with the job. But Casey never forgot his place in the drama's scheme of things. He was a censor with a heart; a censor with an eye to the bright side of life. He could stop a show—or close it—but his manners were always graceful.

* * *

Curiously, Mr. Casey's censorial manoeuvres were always helpful to the theater. In 28 years of coming and going; of reading and studying, he actually barred only two plays. One of them, "The Easiest Way," could return tomorrow with full approval by Mr. Casey. But times have changed. John (Honey-Fitz) Fitzgerald was mayor when this Belasco classic was shoved aside. There might have been a little politics in it; but John Casey never lifted an eyelash. He always was against dirt in the theater.

* * *

And yet, John Casey was the theater's best friend. Beset by rules and legal restrictions, he played fair, even liberally, with shows that might have been ruthlessly pushed off the boards. Casey had constant trouble with Earl Carroll; he never had a misunderstanding with Florenz Zeigfeld.

* * *

Rattling the Skeleton — Ed Wynn's name, when the local rabbi in Philadelphia had completed his orisons, was put down in the family records as Israel Edwin Leopold.

The footlight fare scintillates—Reri, South Sea Island lass featured in photodrama and Ziegfeld Follies, shines in song and dance, and there is a superb stage revue, "Mystery."

Real Bull Fight in Cantor's New Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 31—There will be no fake bull fight in Eddie Cantor's picture, "The Kid From Spain." I'll tell you how I know. Sidney Franklin, the greatest living matador, has been signed by Samuel Goldwyn to play himself in the Cantor picture.

Louella O. Parsons

Sidney Franklin (not the director) was born in Brooklyn. He sailed for Spain and in an incredibly short time became the sensation of Europe. He is probably today the best-known bull fighter in the world.

When the inspiration struck Mr. Goldwyn he sent word to Mr. Franklin, who was about to board the Magellan for Spain, and asked him how he'd like to become a movie actor. Mr. Franklin would and did.

One of the very best character actors in Hollywood is Gregory Ratoff. There is no one who can put so much comedy into Jewish characters and at the same time a certain pathos. Mr. Ratoff probably has more current offers than any actor, even our handsome young leading men. He is playing in "Phantom of Crestwood" and "Sweepings" at Radio, and in a week he moves to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for an important role in "Whistling in the Dark." Irving Thalberg bought the rights of "Whistling in the Dark" from Joseph Schenck and is planning to star Robert Montgomery. Mr. Ratoff's wife, Mlle. Leontovich, who created the role of the dancer in the New York stage production of "Grand Hotel," seems bound to have as much success as her husband. Two film companies are dickering for her, but it looks as if Columbia will win out.

Mary Changes Plans

The Frances Marion story of the poor little seamstress, "Happy Ending," will not be made by Mary Pickford. Instead, Mary will put into production another story by Frances, "Shanty Town," which is being prepared for screening as rapidly as possible. "Shanty Town" is said to be on the order of "Min and Bill" and Mary is most enthusiastic about it. "Secrets," at one time started by Miss Pickford and later discarded, has been given a new story dress by Miss Marion and will be made after "Shanty Town" is finished. Irving Thalberg, who read "Happy Ending," the story Miss Marion wrote with Mary in mind, has persuaded Mary to sell it to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for Helen Hayes. Miss Hayes will probably make it early in 1933 as she has "Farewell to Arms" to finish at Paramount and "White Sister" waiting for her at M-G-M.

May Allison Editor

The friends of James R. Quirk, who knew of his great love for his wife, May Allison, will rejoice to know that she has been appointed associate editor of Photoplay. When it seemed as if Mrs. Quirk would not be a member of the Photoplay staff three magazines offered her a place with them, in addition to backing that was offered her to start a new publication. Naturally, her interests are with the magazine her husband created and it is a wise move on the part of the board of directors to make her editor. Katherine Doherty, formerly secretary and treasurer, was appointed publisher, while William Walsh acts as managing editor.

Chatter in Hollywood:

Something very new under the sun. Buster Keaton has purchased a private car, a regular palace on wheels which runs with two motors, not unlike a huge automobile. It has three rooms, a kitchen, living room and bed rooms, sleeps six, contains a shower bath, in fact, it is an automobile with all the comforts of home. Buster is so wild about his new toy that he is giving up his house to take up his abode in this car. Last night he and Lew Cody entrained for Lake Tahoe with three servants in charge. Oh yes, there are servants' quarters and a place on top for a tent. Honestly, you have never seen anything like this land yacht, either on land or sea.

Snapshots of Hollywood

GLENN TRYON is nursing a broken nose, received in a fight. RALPH INCE, who inflicted the punishment, made his acting too realistic—it was all a part of the film scene. One hundred and fifteen dollars collected at the dance marathon for Eva Tanguay. JEAN MALIN, w. k. master of ceremonies, here for the opening of the Christie Hotel restaurant, sponsored the collection. BEN BARD, ROSCOE ATES, EDDIE LAMBERT, CHARLIE ERWIN assisted. BOBBIE ARNST, still undivorced from JOHNNY WEISSMULLER, lunching at the Brown Derby. VIOLA DANA in the new shade of green, at the same place, chatting with a group of old friends. ROBERT MONTGOMERY, who recently parted with his appendix, expected back at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio today. GEORGE M. COHAN entertaining at Levy's Tavern with a dinner in honor of MAURICE MANNIE LOWENTHAL, a friend of 35 years. Many film celebrities present, SID GRAUMAN and GROUCHO MARX, chief clowners. ELSIE JANIS and RAMON NOVARRO regular attendants at the Greek Theater, reserving seats for the SCHUMANN-HEINK concert. MARY BRUSH WILLIAMS, well-known newspaper woman and writer, in Hollywood. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Jackie Cooper

Jackie Cooper, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's youngest star, has found a fascinating new plaything which occupies every spare moment. It's a huge prop box, containing everything from tops and water pistols to hospital supplies and vanity cases.

"Breach of Promise"

Theodore von Eltz has been added to the cast of "Breach of Promise" in which Chester Morris and Mae Clarke play the leads.

Film Tale of Palace Life

A genuinely good historic picture holds the Fine Arts screen this week. "Elizabeth of Austria" is the title, and the theme brings the narrative right up to the outbreak of the World War.

The Germans have put their usual finish into the production, from every angle. All the details are looked out for and the acting is superb. Lil Dagover, in a sympathetic role—different from her usual types of the bold bad woman—is excellent as the central figure of the photodrama.

The true life thread is presented with proper attention to movie values.

PLANES CROWD SKY FOR STUDY OF ECLIPSE

The world's most famous astronomers and students of the skies joined with more than 5,000,000 laymen in New England today to watch Dame Nature's 1932 eclipse, the solar system's two-hour free show, not to be repeated here until 1963.

Features of the eclipse, which will run for two hours and 13 minutes from start to end, include:

1 Extensive study and photographing of the eclipse phases—for the first time—from scores of airplanes flying thousands of feet above the earth. The majority of the planes, carrying many scientists, will be out of Boston.

2 Gathering of data by approximately 250 astronomers in 51 scientific expeditions the 100 per cent totality band covering parts of Maine and New Hampshire and the tip end of Cape Cod.

Liners to Cross Path of Eclipse

The Savannah liner altered its sailing time from Boston from 4 p. m. to noon today and the steamer City of St. Louis of that line altered her usual course south to cross the path of totality during the eclipse at sea.

3 Possibility of discoveries through the eclipse studies by which static may be eliminated in radio reception.

4 Attempts from airplanes observations by Northwestern University scientists to prove or disprove the Einstein theory by checking the curve of light rays from stars visible only during the brief totality period.

5 Endeavors of scientists to discover a new element, as helium was discovered during a previous eclipse.

6 United States Naval Observatory study at South Limington, Me., to secure more accurate information about positions of the moon and sun for refinements in keeping earthly time and estimating the size of the universe.

7 Observance of the behavior of animals, birds, fowl, fish and reptiles during the period when the earth is darkened and when the mysterious shadow bands play their light upon the earth just before and after totality.

8 Attempts to obtain a better knowledge of ultra-violet and infra-red rays, made through photometric studies of the corona at totality, by the Harvard Observatory expedition in Maine between Fryeburg and the sea.

9 Photographs taken at 29,000 to 30,000 feet—the highest point at which photographs will be made—by Capt. A. W. Stevens, army aerial photographer, for the National Geographic Society.

Lights Hinder Observers

During the eclipse period, motorists have been requested not to put on their car headlights, because the rays of the headlights will spoil the observation of all persons in its range.

All town and city authorities in the belt of totality have been asked also not to light their street lights and to instruct residents not to light houses or stores during the eclipse.

NEW ENGLAND'S SHOW

Throughout the nation millions will view the eclipse in a greater or lesser degree of totality but it is New England's main show, as it was in 1925 when 100 per cent totality was to the south of Boston.

For the past several weeks, scientists have been moving into the 100 per cent area in Maine and New Hampshire and for the past week, trains and roads have been taxed by laymen bent upon viewing the blotting of the sun from vantage points in the 100 per cent band.

Last night saw a rush northward from Boston by train and automobile and the 11th-hour viewers headed up early today.

Thousands were prepared to watch, however, from Boston rooftops and parks, their own backyards and even from the streets and many amateurs were prepared to make their own photographs of the rare sight.

INDIVIDUAL STUDIES

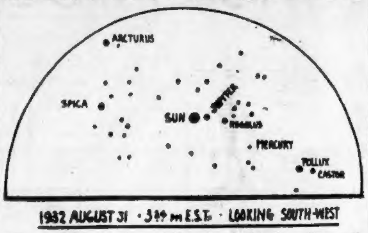
Each of the 47 scientific expeditions has aimed for a definite study during the passage of the moon across the face of the sun.

Harvard, Michigan, the University of California, Swarthmore, the Carnegie Institution of Washington and a number of others aimed at a study of the corona in invisible rays taken on photographic plates and in all the main colors of the rainbow.

The Case School of Applied Science and the Perkins Observatory of Ohio Wesleyan aimed to discover the effects on radio transmission to clear up scientific beliefs that more knowledge of the sun will lead to elimination of many troubles of radio reception.

In the past weeks, scientists, with tons of equipment, gathered in the 100 per cent totality area from all parts of the nation, from Canada, England, Belgium, Japan, Russia, France and other far-off lands, and they were as busy today as they have ever been in their careers before.

MOON'S BLOT BARES STARS



Some of the stars that are visible today during the eclipse, and which have not been visible in previous eclipses, are shown in this drawing by Dr. A. V. Douglas, F. R. A. S., of McGill University, Montreal. The scale of the drawing may be determined from the fact the sun is shown 30 degrees above the horizon. Jupiter is near the sun, while near Jupiter is Regulius. Mercury, not seen in previous eclipses because of its proximity to the sun, is visible in today's eclipse.

Plane Races With Shadow of Eclipse in Big Sky Show

A novel feature of the eclipse program was a race with the eclipse and the sun's shadow on the earth by a plane traveling with the eclipse and shadow at a speed of 135 miles an hour—picking up in this fashion several additional and precious seconds in which to make observations and pictures.

Ross Shippee and Lieut. George R. Johnson, co-operating with the Sproul Observatory at Swarthmore College, planned the race with the earth's shadow in which the shadow, at its traveling rate of 2000 miles an hour, could outdistance the plane 1865 miles for every hour flown.

We'll See Eclipse 8 Minutes Later

Fryeburg, Me., Aug. 31 (INS)—At the moment of the total eclipse beginning here at 3:28 p. m. (E. S. T.) today, the sun, 864,000 miles in diameter, will be about 92,900,000 miles away.

As light travels at the rate of 186,000 miles a second, it requires about 498 seconds, or over eight minutes, for a ray of light from the sun to reach the earth.

Thus all observers will be seeing or obtaining photographs of the corona as it appeared over eight minutes before the moon slid completely across the sun's face.

Many other planes, the majority from Boston will cruise in the moon-darkened area above New Hampshire and Maine with scientists and photographers, and at least one artists, aboard, to study, phohtograph and paint the eclipse.

These include 12 huge army bombing planes from Langley Field, Virginia, which will land at Boston Airport to refuel before taking up the long patrol to the north in the interests of scientific study.

From the naval air station at Squantum, 12 Curtiss "hell-divers" took off before noon under command of Lieut. Felix L. Baker carrying astronomers and scientists from Northwestern University and an artist scheduled to attempt to paint the eclipse in all its color, from the air.

Ten army and national guard planes, five in each formation, will leave Boston Airport to cruise around at high altitude and observe the eclipse. The army flight is under command of Capt. Joseph A. Wilson and the national guard flight under Lieut.-Col. Louis A. Boutwell. When the eclipse is over the ships will proceed to Whitefield, N. H., to take part in an air meet.

Dr. Felix DeRoy, eminent Belgian astronomer now working with the Harvard Observatory, will leave the Boston Airport in an autogyro piloted by William T. Campbell, the doctor, at an altitude of 15,000 feet, to measure the corona and Campbell to make photographs.

Another autogyro will also leave the airport, piloted by William Harris and with Hazen Dean aboard to make pictures.

A 300-horsepower Cessna monoplane, capable of climbing to 20,000 feet and piloted by William Tanner, chief pilot for the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service, will depart from the airport with Sydney Bonnick of 170 Maple st., Malden, who was last year a photographer with the Grenfell Mission in Labrador.

Nearly every other serviceable plane at Boston airport will be in the air during the eclipse.

Meanwhile, at Provincetown and Truro, other scientists will be observing the eclipse in this last edge of the 100 per cent totality area, and several scientists will make observations and photographs from vessels a number of miles off the coast.

PLANES WARNED OFF PHOTO WAY

All airplane pilots, army and commercial, leaving Boston airport today for the eclipse area of 100 per cent totality were requested by Maj. Clarence E. Hodge, acting State supervisor of aviation, to keep out of the camera angles between scientists' cameras on the ground and the eclipse.

On a chart, Maj. Hodge's "spotted" all the scientists' camps for the pilots, especially the camps in the North Conway, N. H., and Fryeburg, Me., sectors, and then plotted the ranges and directions between cameras and the position of the moon as it would pass between the earth and the sun.

The pilots were instructed to fly high and remain out of these ranges.

7 ECLIPSES IN NEXT 100 YEARS

1943—Crosses Alaska at Kavak Island.

1945—Starts at sunrise east of Boise, Idaho, enters Canada near Montana-North Dakota boundary.

1954—Starts at sunrise near Grand Island, Neb., crosses northwestern Wisconsin and Michigan upper peninsula into Canada.

1963—Crosses Alaska near McKinley National Park, and may cross New England. (Astronomers not yet agreed on this).

1970—Crosses Florida from west to east.

1979—Enters United States near mouth Columbia River and crosses northern Montana into Canada.

2017—Sweeps across entire United States on a route through Oregon, near Denver, Nashville and Wilmington, N. C.

Moon Only Shaves Sun Today, Haircut, Shampoo Delayed

By PROF. SUNSTRUCK

Ever since Prohibition really got under way in America, the "moon" has been trying to eclipse everything.

And until the rum ships started functioning in earnest from Canada and Mexico, it was in a fair way to succeed.

So today there will be displayed in the heavens a sort of concentrated and condensed version of the drama which has been on the American stage for the past 13 years.

CAN'T SEE A THING WITH THAT MOON IN THE WAY!
EINSTEIN WAS RIGHT, B'GOSH!!

As in the serial story, running under the title of "The Volstead Act," the sun will finally emerge victorious. But all good shows are like that—the hero always wins over the villain.

Scientists will study the "Atmospheric Layers." But we know the sun "sets" every day, so it is reasonable to suppose that it sets so as to hatch another day. That might explain the whole business. The "layers" lay eggs and the sun hatches out another day. But, of course, the scientists will try to make it sound more technical.

You will have to gaze at the eclipse through dark glasses. Harold Lloyd, Sherlock Holmes, the Face on the Barroom Floor and New Hampshire's Old Man who has a classic countenance and a mountain for a body will not need to buy any from the street peddlers.

Owing to the slump, only people living in a 100-mile wide space of the United States will be able to see the total eclipse. They live in "The Great Black Way" for a day yet in places "The Great White Ways" gleam fullblast.

It will be observed that the moon first merely shaves the sun's face. But don't let that fool you. Later it will give it a trim and, possibly, a shampoo. As the English gentleman who runs the elevator remarked:

"First 'e shaves 'im, then eclipse 'im."

To sum the situation up, though, what's happening is—the moon is putting the sun on the spot.

HORDES OF SUN GAZERS TAX N. E. HOSTS

Conway, N. H., Aug. 31—Standing beside their instruments, 25 groups of scientists from all over the world occupied the band of the eclipse shadow across New England today, waiting for this afternoon's phenomenon while hundreds of thousands of visitors gathered in New Hampshire.

Every available room in the New England vacation land was taken, and thousands who arrived late drove up and down the White Mountain roads hunting for lodgings.

There has never been such a gathering of people to watch a total eclipse of the sun. The last eclipse, observed at the Island of Niuafoou, in the South Seas, Oct. 22, 1930, had for an audience the official party of scientists, 1100 rather startled Polynesian natives and three white males.

Roads throughout the State were choked with traffic today. Every home along the path of totality was packed with guests. Roadside tourist cabins were stuffed and everywhere could be seen hawkers peddling bits of smoked glass, exposed film and all sorts of makeshifts through which to watch the spectacle.

Eclipses Visible on Earth Alone

Fryeburg, Me., Aug. 31 (INS)—The earth is the only planet in the solar system where total eclipses of the sun are visible.

The precise distances and sizes of the moon and sun make it possible for the moon just to fit the disc of its body over the face of the sun.

Satellites of the other planets in the solar system are either too small, or too large, or at the wrong distances, to produce the phenomenon.

Hard Work Faces Eclipse Observers

By GOBIND BEHARI LAL
Universal Service Science Editor

Lancaster, N. H., Aug. 31—Dr. Walter S. Adams, director of the Mount Wilson observatory solar expedition here, is very well satisfied with the county fair playground, where he has established his astronomical court. Three days after the eclipse, merry-go-rounds will whirl for the White Mountain folks, who are already somewhat confusing the eminent astronomers with showmen.

One thousand feet above sea level and girded around by green hills, the astronomers found their labors of preparation for this afternoon relatively pleasant.

Dr. Adams, in gray shirt and overalls, working as hard as any mechanic, described briefly his program of observations during the eclipse as follows:

"I shall work with the moving film spectroghaph to photograph the flash spectrum. You know that is the spectrum of the chromosphere, or colored atmosphere around the sun, which, during the toal eclipse, shows what we call bright lines of the spectrum.

"Dr. T. Dunham, Jr., will make snapshots of the flash spectrum each second or so. Dr. E. E. Ellerman will make photographs of the corona. Drs. S. W. Michelson and Edison Pettit, who have done so much work with thermocouples, will take radiation measurements of the corona. Thermocouples are two metal combinations, such that as soon as light waves fall upon them an electric current is started. They can measure temperature up to one millionth of a centigrade degree.

Tunney's Reaction. Safer Than Motoring.

Speculator Spells Trouble to Boxer Flyers

IT'S ALTOGETHER DIFFERENT sitting in the cockpit of an airplane with the red flames leaping in at you and simply standing by and looking at other fellows who have "cracked up." But, nevertheless, you'll find a lot of the boys comparing the reactions to airplane accidents of Gene Tunney and his successor on the heavyweight throne, Max Schmeling. When taking off for Speculator, the old Tunney training camp up there on the roof of New York State in the heart of the Adirondacks, where Max is going to tune up for the Milk Fund bout with Mickey Walker, the amphibian strained a wing, swooped into the Hudson, caught fire, and Herr Schmeling, Herr Yoe Yocobs and Herr Hype Igoe—Gee, we never thought Max would forgive Hype for that midnight serenade Hype, Horst Walther, the German correspondent, and your humble scribe gave Schmeling when he was training for Sharkey at Endicott—all were treated to a durned good scare. They were all singed a bit by the flames before someone brought the fire extinguisher into play. No one certainly could blame Schmeling when he climbed out of the broken-winged and singed plane for deciding: "Huh, we go to Speculator by train. Not so fast as plane, but—Gott in Himmel!—Ve all get there, anyway!"

BUT THE BOYS will remember when a plane that was to carry Tunney from Speculator to New York for his farewell bout with Tom Heeney cracked up on the Hamilton golf links, how the accident failed to shake the equanimity of Tunney in the least. A couple of days later Gene calmly climbed into the plane and went sailing like an eagle over those blue Adirondack peaks to follow the Hudson down to the big city. Some of the boys will say Tunney had more nerve than Schmeling. But we don't believe it. Max and Gene are about of the same temperament and each has the same nerve, or rather lack of nerves. Tunney, you must remember, only saw that "crack-up" at Speculator. Max was in one and we'll wager that Tunney, if he had been in the same situation as Schmeling with the lurid flames shooting into the cockpit, like Max Gene would have decided to "take the train."

STILL WE'LL NEVER forget the insouicance and sang-froid Tunney showed in that Speculator "crack-up." His friends, Bernard Gimbel, the department store owner; young Sam Pryor, son of the owner and part owner himself of the Remington Arms Company—it was Sam Pryor who introduced Gene to the present Mrs. Tunney when she was pretty Polly Lauder—James I. Bush, the financier, and Charles V. Bobs, backer of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition, had visited Gene in his training camp, said good-bye to him at the hotel and had motored to the links of the Hamilton Golf Club to take off for New York. We were lunching at Osborn's Hotel when the telephone rang and a friend at the golf club said: "Hurry over here, George. That New York plane just cracked up. It's——"

WE DIDN'T WAIT for further particulars. We shot out of the dining room into the first car we could grab in front of the hotel. Our own car was 300 yards away, parked in front of the telegraph office. When a reporter is on the trail of a story he does not stand upon circumstance. Into the strange car we bolted. Tunney, coming up the path, saw us clambering into the strange car and, sensing something was up, yelled: "What's the matter, George?" We already were shooting up the road before we answered; "That Gimbel plane has cracked up." The old boat we had jumped in couldn't get more than 50 miles out of herself to save its life, and in less than a mile Tunney, in his high-powered roadster, had caught us. But even a world's champion can't lick a newspaperman on the trail of a story, and we succeeded in making the sharp turn around one end of Lake Pleasant ahead of Gene and riding him so wide he couldn't pass us. We were going to be first on that "crack-up" scene or bust. But we'll own up that in the long straightaway before we reached the golf links Gene caught up with us. It was a dead heat. We jumped out of the cars together.

THE BIG GOLD and black Fairchild monoplane lay half crumpled on the greensward, looking for all the world like a giant oriole with a broken wing. The blood was streaming down the forehead of Bobs. Bernard Gimbel's pants leg had been ripped from cuff to waist, and there he stood with one bare leg and his pants flapping ludicrously in the wind. The pilot, Billy Winston, covered with dust, grease and blood, was sitting on a fallen tree having his leg bandaged. Although the windshield was shattered to bits, the fuselage torn and one steel chair in the cockpit twisted as if wrenched by a Titan through a miracle none of the fliers were seriously hurt. But everyone knew they had been saved by a miracle.

IT WAS A TENSE moment. Everyone was on edge—everyone save Tunney. "Well, this means you take the train to New York, Gene," we remarked. "Why, I see no reason to alter my plans," calmly spoke Gene. "I am going to New York by plane as arranged." Astounded, we exclaimed: "Why, after seeing this 'crack-up,' you're not going to take any chances with so much at stake, are you?" The champion replied: "I'm not taking any chances. Nothing would have happened here if they hadn't overloaded the plane with a couple of extra heavyweights. I don't like train travel. It's too hot and stuffy. Besides statistics show that there are as many train accidents as there are airplane. And as far as motoring to New York goes I'll bet you can't go 25 miles on the road to New York without seeing some auto accident or tales of it. Airplane travel is just as safe as train and auto and twice as fast and comfortable." And later Tunney calmly used the same arguments with Promoter Tex Rickard and his managers, Billy Gibson and Bill McCabe, all of whom sought to dissuade him from flying to New York.

BILL McGEEHAN, who accompanied Tunney on the trip from Speculator to New York, said that Gene drowsed most of the way down. Later Gene told us that the only time he suffered any inconvenience in a plane was on the trip from Stroudsburg to Philadelphia for the first Dempsey fight. The air over the Poconos was full of pockets and exceedingly "bumpy." Pilot Casey Jones, as well as Tunney, had a touch of plane sickness. Like Tunney, Schmeling has flown a lot, too, and never until last Monday showed any signs of shakiness. But as we said before, Tunney never sat in the cockpit with the flames shooting at him. Put Gene in the same seat as Max was in last Monday, and the Fighting Marine, like the Black Uhlan, probably would have decided to take a train. It would have been common sense. Both Tunney and Schmeling are gifted with a more than ordinary amount of it.

British Walker Cup Team Named by Tolley

By the Associated Press

The British Walker Cup golf team, which has yet to gain a victory, today stole a lead on its American rivals. The Britons were first in announcing their lineups for tomorrow's opening foursome matches at The Country Club.

The study veteran, Cyril Tolley, twice a British amateur champion and a member of five international teams, assumed the role of graduate manager in acting as the lineup spokesman. He named the British pairings as follows:

1—Capt. Tony Torrance and Leonard Crawley.
2—John Burke and John Stout.
3—Rex and Lister Hartley.
4—John Fiddian and Eric McRuvie.

ANNOUNCE TEAM TONIGHT

Although he has probably definitely decided upon his foursome selections, Francis Ouimet, national amateur titlist and American team leader, said he would not name them until tonight.

Ouimet has five inexperienced international match players in his squad of 11. It is likely that he will be forced to use at least two of these rookies.

His top strength appears to include himself, George Voigt, Jess Sweetser, Maurice McCarthy, Don Moe and Harrison R. ("Jimmy") Johnson.

The latter is handicapped by a twisted ankle and he may not play.

USE RECRUITS

If he is held out of the play, Ouimet will use three of these Walker Cup recruits, Gus Moreland, new Western amateur champion; Jack Westland, 1931 national amateur runner-up; George T. Dunlap, Jr., Charlie Seaver and Billy Howell, in tomorrow's opening play.

Each member of the rival teams has had plenty of work on The Country Club's famous layout, scene of the international play. Therefore the players will probably becontent with light workouts.

The Britons have been over the course so many times during the past week that Captain Torrance was forced to order them to ease up yesterday to avoid staleness. The American veterans have often competed on that course, where Ouimet won his open championship in 1913 and Sweetser won the 1922 amateur crown, and they have been able to give much valuable advice to the new members of the team, which this year will be minus the services of Bobby Jones.

The great Atlantan played in five of the six previous team matches. Ouimet is the only American to play on every team since the competition was first started in 1922 at Southampton, N. Y.

Britons Make Strong Bid for Trophy

By BILL GRIMES

Represented by its most formidable aggregation in the annals of international team matches, England will make its seventh attempt to lift the Walker Cup from the United States tomorrow and Friday at The Country Club.

For 10 days the English players have been practicing at Brookline. In order to be at the very peak of their games, the Britons have devoted all of their time to golf, politely declining all socials.

Until they arrived in this country, the British team had never played the American ball, that is, to such an extent as to be familiar with its actions. However, they were not long in discovering that their narrow bladed clubs were not suited for the bigger ball. Also, they found that our ball required a firmer stroke on the greens, and that it took considerable practice properly to play lofted irons, from No. 6 down.

BRITONS PUTTING WELL

From morning to night the Britons have been out on The Country Club course every day. With few exceptions they have all developed a fine putting touch, which was noticeably lacking during the first few days of their stay at Brookline. They have devoted much time and study to playing high pitch shots to the greens and have noted the effects of a trailing as well as a head wind on their shots.

Off the tee and through the fairgreens the Britons are perfect. They have plenty of length on drives and their iron play is superior to that of most of the American team.

The Britons appear to have a better balanced aggregation. But there is no outstanding player on the English team whereas the Americans have Francis Ouimet, Jesse Sweetser and George Voigt who are strokes better than any of their teammates.

Among the newcomers who will represent the United States, Gus Moreland appears to be the first choice. He is a real golfer and is expected to be prominent during the coming matches. Charlie Seaver began to show form yesterday as did George Dunlap, but whether they can come through when pitted against the English is problematical.

U. S. STARS OFF FORM

Billy Howell, Don Moe and Maurice McCarthy are all below expectations, while Jimmy Johnstone, who is handicapped by a weak ankle, is not at his best.

Unless some of the Americans who are off their game snap into it by tomorrow the Walker Cup may leave this country for the first time.

From Capt. Tony Torrence right down through to the last player, the British are fine golfers. Torrence is steady and tough to beat in match play, while the Hartleys, Rex and Lister, John Burke, Eric Fiddian, Bill Stot, Eric McRuvie and John De Forrest all are worthy competitors.

Among the English regulars, John De Forrest, the amateur champion, is the only player who has made a poor showing during the practice sessions.

4 SPEED PILOTS IN CHICAGO BOAT RACE

Chicago, Aug. 31—Four outstanding outboard pilots of America today entered the central division outboard championships to be decided on the world's fair lagoon, Sunday afternoon, Sept. 18.

Heading the list was Ray Pregenzer, holder of the world's marathon speed record. Pregenzer drove his century hurricane boat from Milwaukee to Chicago, a distance of eighty-five miles, in 1 hour, 58 minutes to average 43.89 miles per hour to shatter the former mark. Pregenzer will race in most of the professional events.

STUDENT IN RACE

Joe Venezia, a student at Purdue entered from Indianapolis. Joe was the winner of Class C in the 1931 New York to Albany marathon.

Detroit will be represented in all professional events by Jack Wood.

The other famous driver is Hub Meyer of Petosky, Mich. He is the present champion in Class C, Division II, and is gunning for the nation title.

GAR WOOD STARTER

This fact is what makes this Chicago Herald and Examiner event so interesting. The boys will be exerting every effort to win in the regatta here since defeat will keep them out of the national event.

With more than 100 drivers competing and so very few classes to be decided, there will be action aplenty when Gar Wood sends them on their way in the initial event.

MALDEN NINE HOST TO HYDES TONIGHT

The Hyde Shoe nine, with its stance at the top of the Suburban Twilight League getting just a little shaky, has sent an S.O.S. to Johnny Murphy, Cape League pitcher, to twirl for it tonight against the Malden Athletics at Ferryway Green in Malden.

Murphy, local flinger who starred in at Somerville, will be facing Elmer French of the Athletics.

Hyde Shoe won the first half pennant, but is very anxious to cop the second-half title as well.

FETE FOR WALKER

Out in Roslindale tonight there will be a little celebration for George Walker, Roslindale manager, who has his team practically certain of the second-half championship in the City League.

Park Commissioner Long, James Roosevelt son of the Democratic presidential nominee, and Senator Michael Ward will be on hand.

Ray Finnegan's St. Mark's team will be the Roslindale opposition. Walker, since taking over Roslindale, has given that town three pennants in four seasons. If it was Chicago Walker might be getting fired but the Roslindale fans appreciate good work in a different manner and will give him notice of it tols sundown.

CONCORD, WALTHAM PLAY

Concord and Waltham, still struggling for playoff berths in the Boston Twilight League, play important games tonight. It is quite certain that Allston is "in" for the pennant but Waltham and Concord are after the runner-up position.

Waltham faces Allston at Bicycle Park in the Watch City while the Colored Giants present the hurdle in the path of the Concord nine at the Concord Town Field.

SCHAAF, BAER SWAP SOCKS TONIGHT

Chicago, Aug. 31—Ernie Schaaf, Boston heavyweight, and Max Baer of California are waiting for the gong which will send them blazing into action in their ten-round bout here tonight at the Stadium.

Schaaf still rules a 7 to 5 favorite. Despite the fact Baer licked Levinsky at Reno, Chicago fans are of the opinion Schaaf carries too many guns for the Californian. In his last appearance here, Schaaf licked Young Stribling.

Schaaf won the decision over Baer in a hard ten-round bout in New York 19 months ago.

Johnny Buckley and his brother, Jerry will handle Schaaf tonight.

Jack Sharkey, heavyweight champion, who owns half of Schaaf's managerial contract, is vacationing in New Hampshire.

Spa Meet Near Close, It May Be Just as Well With Sponging and All. • The Jockey Club Stirs But It Never Wakes—The Lawrence "Boys."

THE SICK MAN OF SPORTS

The Saratoga Springs race meeting limps to a close with the running of the Hopeful Stakes on Saturday, and it is to be assumed that everybody connected with the sport will be pleased to have it over. The attendance and the racing have been fairish but, by and large, the 31 days have offered just one more proof that horse racing is the sick man of sports.

Crooks and fixers ply their trade practically unmolested around the New York tracks, and no meeting seems complete without at least one sponging or poisoning case getting into print. Which isn't half as surprising as the number that do not get into print.

When the dopers and spongers grow too brazen some half-witted stable hand is arrested, and in the headlines the next day the officers always are "hot on the trail of the higher-ups."

Yes? About as hot, my friends, as a man in a suit of B. V. D.'s spending the winter at the North Pole.

Nobody around any race track is looking very hard for any higher-ups at any time, and on that you can take a ticket longer than the one they'll give you to vote next November.

But the trainer of the poisoned, sponged and maltreated horse is called in to identify the "suspect," which means the poor boob who has been nominated to take the gentle rap. This is a part of the ritual that is never overlooked. I presume it is supposed to indicate great activity on the part of the officials.

"Will you put up bail for this man?" asked a lawyer of the trainer in a recent sponging case.

"I hope he gets 20 years," replied the trainer. And, then, to the lawyer: "Who hired you to defend this man?"

"One of the biggest men on the race track," boasted the lawyer. So they let it go at that. Apparently it was felt that to follow up this line of questioning might become embarrassing.

I did not make my usual visit to Saratoga this year. First of all, I have been suffering from a slight personal financial depression, which, I am happy to say, Mr. Hoover assures me is about over. A great comforter, Mr. Hoover, and I never tire of hearing him sing that song, "just around the corner there's a blue-bird in the sky." That it has turned out to be an old crow every time I peeped is, I assume, no fault of his.

The other reason I wasn't anxious to get to Saratoga was that it always annoys me to compare the place as it is with the place it should, and could so easily be. Here we have everything possible—climate, scenery, tradition, health-giving waters—to make one of the great resorts and most picturesque race meetings in all the world. With what result? Why would you believe it, they can't even get the touts to come on from Chicago for the racing!

And All for $3.85 Per:

So they go on year after year with the same scrawny three and four horse fields, the same ridiculous admission prices, the same ridiculous system of betting, the same ridiculous odds.

"Oh, goodness no," they exclaim in horror, when it is suggested that the present betting system is as obsolete and unsatisfactory as a high-wheel bicycle," we couldn't change our betting system."

Why couldn't they? Who would stop them? Who has tried to change it, and when?

The one they have isn't really legal, as they well know. It's dollars to doughnuts they could install an envelope form of betting tomorrow and not a single soul would let out a peep.

The wide world knows that the attitude of the voters toward racing is far more liberal than it was 25 years ago. Florida passed a mutuel bill. Illinois passed a mutuel bill. Indiana passed a mutuel bill. How far is New York State behind these so-called provincial states?

Well, I'll tell you, in the matter of horse racing, 10,000 miles. And I'm a conservative.

The Lawrences—Jack and "Pants":

Now comes a letter from Mr. Jack Lawrence, who writes:

Dear Bill—So many Speculatorites have inquired about you since my arrival here a few days ago that I concluded I might as well sit down and do a little inquiring myself. As you have probably surmised already I am here in Speculator for the purpose of reporting the doings of Herr Max Schmeling as he prepares for his fist fight with Mickey Walker at the Garden Bowl on Sept. 19.

If the keen interest manifested on these Adirondack mountain peaks is any criterion the coming bout should roll up a handsome sum for Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's Milk Fund. Even your old friend, "Pants" Lawrence, who seems to be utterly immune to the accumulating years, has put in a reservation for a couple of ringside seats—which is something he neglected to do when Gene Tunney trained here for Heeney in 1928.

"Pants" is among those who have filed inquiries about you. He wants to know when you are coming up and when, not to mention how. You will recall that Mr. Lawrence, when he was sheriff of Hamilton County, arrested Chester Gillette for the murder of Grace Brown on a lake near here, thereby grabbing himself a lot of lurid publicity and providing Theodore Dreiser with the melancholy plot of "An American Tragedy."

Mr. Lawrence, I am told, has rounded the three-score-and-ten mark, but is still going strong and expects to be elected sheriff again next fall. He could have my vote if I had one hereabouts and we are NOT related . . . a fact which seemed to take quite a load off "Pants'" mind.

When you arrive you will find the same lake and the same mountains, but it is a much improved training camp over the one Tunney used for his last fight. The facilities are better, and, if I may say so, the gals are a lot easier to look at. That, however, is a phase of the situation in which you would take only an abstract and academic interest, as I do.

I think this is the most interesting fist fight that has been offered along the Atlantic seaboard since Messrs. James J. Corbett and James J. Jeffries kicked up the sands at Coney Island for 24 rounds. I will leave it to you to predict the winner and limit myself to predicting that both winner and loser will know that he has been in a tough spot.

Professor McCarney is here, and his stories being all new to the natives they come from magnificent distances to hear him. Last night he convulsed an eager audience with a detailed description of how the Ku Klux Klan came close to hanging Joe Jacobs and Mike McTigue to a sour apple tree that time in Columbus, Ga. Don't miss this—JACK LAWRENCE.

WINS 3-2 OVER SPRINGFIELD IN OPENER

Special to the American

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 31—Springfield, Eastern champion and hope, must beat New Orleans' Papooses in the second game of the finals in the American Legion's junior baseball tourney at the Municipal Athletic Field, here, this afternoon, or the title will travel southward.

If the Bay Staters come through, the third and final game will be played on the same diamond tomorrow afternoon.

Today's game will start at 3:30, a half hour later than yesterday, because of the eclipse.

The solar show will be a novelty to the New Orleans boys, but not to their rivals. The easterners saw an eclipse yesterday, when with 10,000 fans, including Judge Landis, commissioner of baseball, and prominent state, city and Legion dignitaries looking on, they lost the opening game, 3 to 2, when the visitors scored three runs in the final frame.

Joe Graffagnini of the southern club won his own game with a ninth-inning hit that gave New Orleans the win.

With the Bay State team leading 2-0 until the ninth and commanding a 2-1 margin with two gone in the final half of that stanza, the Louisiana mound artist hit to push home two of his mates.

The Louisiana team came to bat and Ingolia, pinch hitting, singled and moved up on a single by Mounes. Diaz forced Mounes. Ingolia scored on Constancy's drive to left. Fraiche flied out and then Graffagnini made his hit.

Springfield scored in the fifth on a triple by Rafaele, a single and stolen base by Peloquin, and a single by Palpini.

Olympic Champion Joins Pro Ranks

Toronto, Aug. 31 (AP)—Horace "Lefty" Gwynne, hard-hitting Toronto bantamweight, who won the 118-pound title at the recent Olympic games at Los Angeles, has turned professional.

This announcement was made last night by officials of Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens who signed Gwynne to appear in a preliminary to the Emile "Spider" Pladner-Panama Al Brown world championship bout here Sept. 12.

Risko, Levinsky Wind Up Training

Cleveland, Aug. 31 (AP)—Announcing themselves ready for tomorrow night's bout, Johnny Risko and King Levinsky wound up their training today with easy workouts to develop speed. They confined themselves principally to shadow boxing.

The Levinsky-Risko bout for 12 rounds will be the headliner of the News Christmas fund program in the Cleveland Stadium.

Ice Leagues May Join Forces Soon

Detroit, Aug. 31—Frank Calder, National Hockey league head, presided at a meeting of hockey solons here, held for the purpose of consolidating the American and National ice circuits. It is thought that the plan will be successful.

Zachow Kayoes Jordan in 2d Round

Portland, Me., Aug. 31—Irish Tommy Jordan of Brooklyn, N. Y., was kayoed by Ad Zachow New England middleweight champion here in the second round of a scheduled 10 round bout.

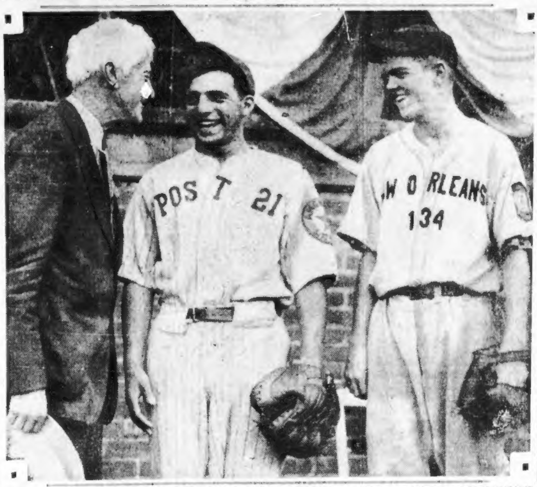
JUDGE AND A. L. NINES' LEADERS MEET



JUDGE K. M. LANDIS PETE SICILIANO, SPRINGFIELD JAMES FRAICHE, NEW ORLEANS

An anecdote related by the judge, an interesting story teller, gave himself and the two baseball captains a big laugh just before the start of the game which New Orleans won over Springfield, 3 to 2, at Manchester, N. H. The fray was the first of the American Legion junior world series. Another game is on today.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

JUDGE EMIL FUCHS and Charley Adams of the Braves won't tell you anything about it. They are that sort of fellows.

So let me spill the story. Rockland on the South Shore has a Milk Fund. It is conducted along the same lines as Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's Milk Fund in New York. Every cent that is raised for the fund is spent purchasing milk for the needy. No executive overhead of any kind.

Mr. Boston

When Judge Fuchs first came to Boston, his attention was called to the Rockland Milk Fund.

"I know what Mrs. Hearst's Milk Fund does in the crowded tenement districts of New York," said the Judge. "I know there is also plenty of opportunity to aid the unfortunate in Massachusetts.

"I own a ball club, and I am willing to bring it to Rockland each summer for a game against the best club available. Of course I'll pay all the expenses in connection with my own team. Let that be my personal contribution."

So the Braves have gone to Rockland each year, and played one of the crack nines of the South Shore league. When Charley Adams bought in on the Braves, he gave Fuchs his full co-operation on the Milk Fund games. All he asked was to be allowed to pay half of the expenses.

NEXT TUESDAY afternoon the Braves will go to Rockland for their annual visit. They will play Falmouth, the star team of the South Shore league. An idea of what the Braves' pitchers may expect can be gained by glancing at the box score of the Falmouth-Orleans game which was played at Orleans on Monday.

Orleans was leading by a score of 8 to 2 when the league leading Falmouth club came to bat in the eighth inning. Six runs were needed to tie the score and seven to go out in front. Of course Falmouth collected seven runs. That's the way it has been doing things all season.

After the Milk Fund game on Tuesday, Chief of Police Mike Stewart of Scituate will furnish the ball players with a motorcycle escort which will lead them to Hugo's in Scituate where a dinner will be tossed in honor of the diamond heroes.

* * *

JUST A TIP to our American Walker Cup team. Keep an eye on Johnny Burke, Irish golf champion, who will use his shots for the British team in the matches at The Country Club. I saw Burke playing with Jack Leary and John Fitzpatrick at the Scituate Golf Club over the week-end. I watched him slam one drive at the fourth tee for a distance of 312 yards. Any bird who can pop 'em off the tee for 312 yards can play on my team any day.

* * *

NO WONDER JACK LEARY thought his record of 65 for Scituate was going to be shattered. Burke took a 67 which is marvelous golf. Frank Slattery, former Schoolhouse Commissioner, was in the Burke gallery, and admitted that the Irish champion knows his golf.

* * *

BILLY AMES tells me he believes Ad Zachow, New England middleweight champion, has an even chance to win from Lou Brouillard in their bout at the Boston Garden on September 9.

PASSAS MEETS SEIBEG AT FENWAY

Steve Passas, who claims he fears no wrestler, will defend this claim when he steps in against Sahib Seibeg in the main bout at Fenway Park tonight.

Passas, ruler of the lightheavyweights, will weigh but 175 pounds to 229 for Seibeg.

In the semi-final bout Bill Brooks will step in with Jim Longacre, former University of Pennsylvania football hero.

Ted Germaine faces a tough tar in Louis Poplin, middleweight champion of the navy. Poplin, who is stationed at Newport, lost his first bout here to Paul Adams.

There will be five preliminaries. In the event of rain Gordon's show will be put on tomorrow night.

YANKS 10-7 CHOICE TO DRUB CUBS

By RILEY GRANNON

In all probability the 1932 World Series will start four weeks from today with the New York Yankees representing the American League and the Chicago Cubs representing the National League before a crowd of 75,000 in the Stadium at New York.

Other clubs in each circuit have a mathematical chance to win out, but little attention is being paid to these long shots. The average fan takes it for granted that the Yanks and Cubs will be the rivals in the annual fall classic.

YANKS 10-7 CHOICE

The American Leaguers are today 10 to 7 favorites on most books. These odds may shorten or lengthen some, but not much, before the series starts. The Yanks are bound to remain the choice of the majority. If the Cubs, who have won their last 11 starts, keep up the spurt, the price against them will shorten. If they have a slump, it will lengthen.

The series promises to be a battle of pitchers.

The Cubs' punch is little better than ordinary. Effective flinging has kept the Windy City entry in the race all season.

The Yankees attack is rated highly and it is stronger than that of the Cubs, yet it is pitching rather than hitting that is responsible for the big lead the McCarthymen now enjoy in the American League race.

N. Y. SLUGGERS MIGHTY

Ruth, Gehrig, Combs, Lazzeri and others of the New Yorkers are mighty hitters, but good pitching can stop the Yanks. Ted Lyons has little trouble with them. Bump Hadley and George Blaeholder of the Browns recently held them to three and four hits, respectively.

The Cubs, though, have one asset that might overcome the paper superiority of the Yanks and keep the world's title in possession of the National League.

And that's the courage of old Burleigh Grimes, the same asset that is responsible for the crown now belonging to the senior loop. Burleigh's lion-hearted efforts alone saved the Cards from defeat at the hands of the A's last fall.

With Burleigh missing, we would give 2 to 1 on the Yanks. With the fighting old veteran in there, we wouldn't take the New Yorkers on the short end, even though we think they will win.

MANY DROP OUT OF 15 MILE SWIM

Toronto, Aug. 31 (INS)—While thousands cheered the greatest field of long distance swimmers ever to face the starter's gun, the long 15-mile annual Marathon swim began here this morning with weather conditions perfect and with George Young, winner last year, favored to repeat.

The large field got away perfectly, but it wasn't long before the killing pace set by John Hawkins, Isadore Spondore and Young discouraged the trailers and, before the first two miles had been covered, the field had been reduced to 190, with lifeboats picking up the men.

WATER 62 DEGREES.

The water was 62 degrees, warm for this time of the year, and a new record was generally expected.

At the end of the first lap Jack May of Honolulu was leading by a good hundred yards. Spondore was next and then came Johnny Hawkins, former Olympic star.

George Young was swimming easily in fourth place, content to keep within striking distance of the leaders.

SAVING STRENGTH.

Gianni Gambi, heavily swathed in grease, was next and the field was bunched closely behind him.

The experienced men were conserving strength for the last five miles, which promised to produce a desperate struggle.

Johnny Welch, Red Sox—Halted Indians with four hits.

Lou Gehrig, Yankees—Drove in five runs against White Sox with 30th and 31st home runs.

Ossie Bluege, Senators—His two doubles and single accounted for five runs against Browns.

Jimmie Foxx, Athletics—Cracked 48th homer with one on to beat Tigers, 6 to 4.

Pie Traynor, Pirates—Collected five hits against Braves in twin bill, including three doubles and two triples.

Guy Bush, Cubs—His relief pitching stopped Giants.

FERRELL FLAREUP AMAZES FANS

SUSPENSION OF 10 DAYS GIVEN WES

By JOE CASEMAN

It's quite apparent now to all who witnessed the final Red Sox-Indians game why Cleveland would be willing to trade Wes Ferrell.

Such a display of anger and temperament as the Forest City mound ace displayed when he was ordered to retire, after being found for a walk, three hits and two runs in the opening inning, was never before seen on a local park.

He yelled across to Manager Peckinpaugh on the bench demanding that he be allowed to stay in and when he was refused, he raved and fumed, threw his cap in the air and the ball on the ground, doing his best to tear the mound apart with his spikes and wouldn't budge from the field until Jack Russell appeared to relieve him and Umpire Bill Dineen ordered the game to go on.

It was reported after the game that Ferrell was handed a ten days' suspension by Manager Peckinpaugh.

The Red Sox eventually won the tilt, 6 to 2, and thus gained an even break in four starts against the fourth-place Peckmen.

Sleepy Boy Johnny Welch did the native hurling and Ferrell at his best would have had plenty of trouble besting the performance of the Newark rookie.

Johnny grew a bit wild towards the close of the tilt but he was always able to bear down when in danger.

Ferrell, Russell and Harder, who finished up, all looked alike to Smead Jolley and Dale Alexander, each of the Fenway sluggers getting a double and two singles in four times up.

Alexander moved into the A. L. [illegible] with .363. Jimmy Foxx is second with .360.

ANKLE INJURY PUTS KNOTHE OUT FOR YEAR

Pittsburgh, Aug. 31—There'll be smiles on the faces of the Boston Braves for the first time in three weeks after their fourth and final game with the Pirates this afternoon.

For then the Warriors will have finished their last and most disastrous road trip of the season and be on their way home.

The pennant hopes of Bill McKechnie and his boys were high when they left Boston early this month. They were in third place and only three games from the top.

Instead, they ran into all kinds of trouble at every stop except St. Louis and now the best they can expect to do is regain a first division berth during their final home stand.

The leg injury jinx hit the Braves again as Fritz Knothe slid into second base.

Fritz was carried from the field and taken to a hospital where it was found he had a chipped bone in his ankle. He will be out for the year.

Both games of Monday's twin-bill were close, but that's no satisfaction to the Tribesmen.

In the opener the visitors were always ahead until the eighth, once by a margin of three runs, but neither Bobby Brown nor Ed Brandt could hold the Bucs, who walked off with a 10 to 7 verdict by scoring five runs in the eighth.

Old Tom Zachary put up a great battle with Bill Swift in the nightcap and the invaders remained tied in this contest until the ninth, when the Gibsonmen put over a tally to win out 3 to 2.

Walcott Skid From Fame Was Rapid

By JOE MOONEY

Joe Walcott was a skyrocket in the world of pugilism. And, like all skyrockets, he came down almost as fast as he went up on the world of fisticuffs.

Almost a month after the great robbery of 1904, when he lost the welterweight crown to the Dixie Kid, crestfallen Joe picked up a bout in Portland with Sandy Ferguson.

Ferguson, to the amazement of all the spectators, assembled in the place, held Walcott to a ten-round draw. The worst was yet to come.

Walcott was shipped to Baltimore to meet the rising young Peter Jackson. Peter was a Baltimore boy. So on June 10, 1904, the setting star that was Walcott was laced into the four-ounce gloves to meet Young Peter. The two welterweights turned in a slashing three rounds before Walcott was tagged.

WALCOTT KAYOED

Coming out for the fourth, Jackson connected with a right which sent Walcott to the canvas, genuinely out for the count of ten. It was the first time in the Barbados Demon's career that he had not been present and conscious while the referee was tolling the fatal ten seconds.

It is interesting to note, when you consider the fistic calendar of present day champions and their immediate challengers, that Walcott was again in the ring less than a fortnight after the numbing experience with Young Peter Jackson. On June 23, 1904, Walcott fought Mike Donovan in Baltimore. In five rounds Donovan went down to hear the birdies while Walcott exchanged bon mots with the gallery.

But Joe Walcott's place in the sun had been sublet—1904 was just six months old when he met Larry Temple, who held the Barbados Demon to a draw in 10 rounds, which represented the zenith in hard fought bouts.

DREW WITH LANGFORD

Then the grinning Sam Langford, the Boston Tar Baby whose entrance in the fistic records had been made a short two years before, also held Walcott to a draw in Manchester.

Years later, Langford and Walcott were partners in a tour around New York and Boston. New boys were the principals in the rings. Langford and Walcott were displayed as curiosities of a dimly remembered past.

Indulgent patrons of present day boxing watched these two great ringmasters walk through a demonstration of the blows that made them famous. A splay footed and pudgy giant waltzed under the ring lights against a stocky and half blind sparring partner.

REFORM ERA CAME

In 1905, the record books contain not a single result of a Walcott fight.

Reform had swept the country a year before. Fights were conducted in "private" clubs, and everything was distinctly on the hush-hush in the fight game.

Two years to the day that he had been knocked out by Young Peter Jackson, Walcott was back in the wars. On July 10, 1906, the Barbados Demon sank Jack Dougherty at Chelsea.

This fight was little more than a ready-up for the aging Walcott to meet Honey Mellody, twelve years Walcott's junior, and a puncher who had been knocking all opponents dead since his ring debut in 1902.

Walcott and Mellody were matched to fight Oct. 16 for 15 rounds at Chelsea, 1906. The bottom of the fight ladder had been reached for the Barbados Demon.

DUTRA LEADS PROS WITH 140 AT ST. PAUL

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 31 (US)—Olin Dutra, Santa Monica, California, won medalist honors in the professional golfers' tournament here by turning in two par-breaking rounds of 69 and 71 for a 140 total.

Second to Dutra was Horton Smith, Chicago, with 144, having rounds of 73 and 71.

Eddie Schultz, Troy, N. J.; Ed Dudley, Concordville, Pa.; Joe Kirkwood, Philadelphia, and Tom Creavy, Albany, shot 145.

Other qualifiers were Johnny Golden, Noroton, Conn. 149; Walter Hagen, Detroit, 151.

The playoff which found ten stars playing for two places was brilliant. Abe Espinosa, Chicago, and Al Collins, Kansas City, won their places with birdie threes.

Dave Hackney, Lowell, Mass., and Billy Burke, Greenwich, Conn., went out in the playoff.

Fish and Game

By WIN BROOKS

When Dr. Richard Stone of Brookline says to Dr. Harold Stone of Brookline: "Let's go fishing," two Boylston st. offices are deserted and micropterus dolomieu is in for a very bad afternoon.

There should be more of these father-and-son angling teams, no doubt, but you can't prove it by the small-mouthed black bass.

* * *

In Dr. Richard Stone's office hangs the largest small-mouth I ever saw. In Dr. Harold Stone's office hangs one of the most perfect specimens. There is another bass that was caught and should have been mounted and there is still another that should be mounted but hasn't been caught. They all go into the same story.

* * *

One of the most interesting parts of that story to my mind is that the three bass which were caught were all taken from the water not more than 31 miles from Boston. In a decade of fishing the Belgrades and other famed Maine bass waters I never saw a small-mouth the size of that which hangs in Dr. Richard Stone's office.

* * *

He was caught in Lake Monponset. Furthermore, he was caught on a fly. He weighed eight pounds on one scale and nearly eight and one-half on another just after he was taken from the water. Three hours after he was caught he was weighed in Boston and was officially recorded at a fraction over seven and one-half pounds.

A 4-ounce fly rod and a home-tied Parmachenee Belle took him. The fly, tied especially by the junior Stone for young bass, resembles a Parmachenee gone mad more than anything else. It was cast into a school of herring which the bass was following and it was taken the first cast.

The good Father Creighton, of the Lady of the Lake Parish, sat on his cottage porch and watched the resultant battle. As is so often the case with an unusually large fish of a certain genus, this lunker was not as active as his smaller brothers. He was netted in 25 minutes flat.

"For sport, I'd rather take a four-pounder," said Dr. Dick.

* * *

Dr. Harold's perfect speciman, a light green female fish, weighed about four pounds. It, too, came from Monponset. The fish caught but never mounted, was a 6½-pounder taken from the same lake last month by Dr. Dick. He was caught on a small casting spoon. He wasn't mounted because was torn during the battle.

COBB KAYOES SIGMORE IN SOCK DUEL

Conway's New Coin Starts Off With Ring Win

The new magic coin Jack Conway found in the sands at North Scituate clicked.

Walter Cobb won from Jack Sigmore just as the magic coin said he would. Which keeps Conway's average soaring.

W	L	P.C.
53	9	.854

By JACK CONWAY

Walter Cobb won by a technical knockout over Jack Sigmore in four rounds after a fierce punching duel at an Argonne A. A. show at Fenway Park.

Cobb and Sigmore came up to press notices. Eddie Mack told the world the big fellows would punch it out until one was chilled. That's just what happened.

In the first round, it looked as if Sigmore would be the one to crash through with a knockout. He had Cobb on the floor and in bad condition at the bell.

Then Cobb came on to win. Savage left hooks to the body did the trick. Sigmore was unable to stand up under these body smashes.

BOUT IS STOPPED

Referee Joe O'Connor stopped the bout in the fourth heat after Cobb had opened a big gash over his rival's right eye. At the time Sigmore was helpless and on the verge of a kayo.

The 3000 persons who attended the show gave Sigmore a big hand as he left the ring. He had put up a good scrap against a more experienced battler.

Sigmore came roaring from his corner at the opening of the first round. A swinging right hand punch nailed Cobb high on the jaw and turned him half way around. Late in the round Sigmore nailed Cobb with two short right hand belts to the jaw. Cobb went to the canvas, but got up without taking any count.

Cobb staged a sparkling comeback in the second round. He sent four savage left hooks to the body which doubled Sigmore up.

COBB HAMMERS FOE

Cobb sent a terrific left hook to the body early in the fourth round. The blow doubled Sigmore up. Cobb then punched Sigmore around at will.

Sigmore was defenseless in a neutral corner when Referee Joe O'Connor stepped in. He examined Sigmore and found that he had a three inch gash over his right eye which went as deep as the bone. O'Connor immediately stopped the bout, and awarded the decision to Cobb on a technical knockout.

Hunter Welch of Lowell received a close decision over Trantie Hogan of Walpole in the opening four rounder.

Referee Joe O'Connor cast the first draw vote that has been rendered in a Massachusetts ring since the commission changed its rule in regard to draw decisions, but Judges Francis Bowman of Lynn and Al Bates of Cambridge ruled for Welsh.

Joe Jankowski of Lynn was awarded the verdict over Stanley Koss of Taunton in the second four rounder.

Buster Theil of Norwood scored a technical knockout over Dick Gasperoni of the North End in the third round of another bout booked for four heats.

Henry Surette of Leominster had little trouble in defeating Chester Lanier of Medford in the last of the four rounders.

Billy Nevins of Cambridge furnished a surprise by outpointing Tommy Rawson of East Boston in a busy six-round bout.

Danny Regan of Gardner had Eddie Callahan of Nashua, N. H., on the canvas four times in the opening round of their six-round bout. Callahan, however, kept getting up and managed to weather the six frames. The decision went to Regan.

HOOVER'S CONFIDENCE ONLY AN ECHO OF 1929

By GILBERT SELDES

GILBERT SELDES

"I am calling for the middle of next week a . . . conference of representatives of industry, agriculture and labor . . . to develop certain steps . . . Any lack of confidence in the economic future . . . of the United States is foolish . . ... Words are not of any great importance in times of economic disturbance. It is action that counts . . . The next practical step is the organizing and coordinating of a forward movement of business through the revival of construction activity, the stimulation of exports and of other legitimate business expansion . . ." If these words sound familiar it is not because you read them last week; you read them in the middle of November, 1929, and their author was the only man who could call conferences and inspire confidence: President Hoover. The conference met, made promises, announced plans for expansion of business, pledged itself to uphold wages, guaranteed prosperity, and helped the country so that in the following March President Hoover could say that "all the evidences indicate that the worst effects of the crash upon unemployment will have passed during the next sixty days."

Everything's Fine

As the problem of the unemployed was, therefore, solved by proclamation in the middle of May, 1930, all that was left was to solve the financial problem. How successful this was, with what batteries of conferences and commissions, no one need now to be told. By the end of August, 1932, the President could announce to his latest (if not last) conference that "we are convinced that we have overcome the major financial crisis—a crisis in severity unparalleled in the history of the world—and that with its realization confidence and hope have reappeared in the world."

I wonder if the President, who confuses things at times, hasn't seen the hope and imagined the confidence. When people have confidence they have little need of hope; they have knowledge and assurance.

Why Just Now?

I was abroad when the market boom began and had the pleasure of returning to a cheerful and hopeful America. Bankers, brokers and amateur financiers—of whom I hear through friends who have access to them—seem convinced that the mythical corner has been turned; simple, non-gambling, impoverished people hope for the best. Even they may still wonder why it took two years to arrange for all the great plans to be put into action, why great institutions for lending money sprang into existence this year, why loans to home owners will become operative in the autumn of 1932, and why foreclosures on mortgages will be suspended now—and were not suspended 18 months ago.

A Nasty Choice

The dilemma of the President is not a pretty one. The financial argument I have heard is that it was "necessary" to squeeze out certain quantities of water; in the process thousands of farmers and home owners were also squeezed out of their property. The normal argument is that after our frenzy of speculation it was good for us to suffer; but the proof is wanting that only those suffered who speculated. Two other suggestions remain, and the men who have guided—not to use an ugly word—the United States in the past three years are welcome to their choice: the intellectual horn of the dilemma is that they did not know what was happening and did not know how to stop it; the political horn you can figure out for yourself and then decide who is to be gored.

All Europe's Fault

In his speech last week the President blamed events in Europe for the prolongation of our misfortunes. This is, by now, the classic view; that we went in 1929 into a natural and inevitable panic, which brought on an industrial depression, out of which we were already rising in 1931, when events in Austria, Germany and, finally, England came like a cyclone at the end of a whirlwind and flung us on our backs again. It is a satisfactory explanation: the great economists are sure it is the right one. But it leaves out a great deal, and leaves out, particularly the inaction and wavering of the first 18 months. In that time the fact that we were in an industrial crash was first denied and then belittled; and Congress fiddled with a tariff bill and with appropriations—because it was a Congressional election year—while the home fires were not kept burning.

We are invited to join the President in the greatest hand-washing contest in history and to forget the miserable past. If ten million men were put to work tomorrow the ambition of the President might be satisfied. Yet it remains odd that he should want us to forget our past when his utterances are such astonishing echoes of his own.

VACATIONS NEAR END

Next week will see the bulk of state employes and department heads returned to their desks. August has been the official vacation month on Beacon Hill for several years now and the idea is still being encouraged. The Governor's Council, however, will not sit again for two weeks.

SILVERMAN IS CHAMP

Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman is the champion fisherman of Lake Winnipesaukee. He spends each week-end fishing there. On a Sunday recently he went out with three men and in the course of the afternoon caught 14 bass, one a four-pounder, while his companions returned empty handed. Last Sunday he caught ten bass.

AYOR CLASHES WITH POLICE OVER DOLE

y co-operation from welfare of- ials, and the other departments imed the police reported no evi- nce, only statistics.

Mayor Curley assigned Nathan eller, a member of the welfare ard but also a salaried member the transit commission, to devote s time to serving as a link be- een the welfare department and e police.

"While the police charged 40 er cent unworthy cases, the in- ications are that by the most beral of estimates the number not more than seven per cent," aid the mayor.

XPLAINS "DEAD DOLE"

He brought out that some of the cases reported by police as hav- g bank accounts may have been ready prosecuted by the law de- rtment, and the money recovered.

Regarding 240 families receiving d and not visited by welfare ents for long periods, it was stat- that many of the recipients have report to the department every y.

The dead persons on the list ere explained away by the state- ent that needy families continued be carried on the records under he names of the heads of the fam- ies, even after death of the family eads.

Mayor Curley said the only cases n the police report worthy of con- deration were those of false ad- resses, those with bank accounts nd autos, and those who refused to swer questions—totaling, he fig- ed, about 6?

"Now, look here," said the ayor to Hultman "You investi- ated 500 cases, yet your figures tal to 811 persons. How do u make that out?"

Commr. Hultman: "Why, it's same theory as adding les, oranges and bananas—"

Mayor Curley: "But all you've n us is raspberries."

Commr. Hultman: "We say re are 206 suspected unworthy ses. Some of the individuals re listed under various classifi- ations. There are only 500 names n our list."

EES GOOD IN REPORT

Mayor Curley said: "Why list iens and those with court rec- rds? Under what law do you ppose their receiving aid?"

Hultman: "Under no law. But believe it my duty as police ommissioner, when requested to onduct an investigation, to give thorough report."

Mayor Curley: "The city has no lternative but to aid many of hose you have listed under vari- us classifications in your re- port. Let us prosecute to the imit and purge the list if we can. think the police by investigat- ng have already reduced the list y scaring persons unworthily re- eiving aid. In that we have ac- omplished our main objective."

Chairman Hecht: "I object to hat. I know of no such de- ecrease."

Mayor Curley: "It'll be found here. The next objective is to lear out the crooks and I think ve can do that without ballyhoo."

At the close of the conference shook hands.

Police department: Commr. Hult- n, Supt. Crowley, Deputy Supt. ode, Commissioner's Secretary nard P. Scanlan.

Welfare department: Chairman ht, Nathan Heller, Mrs Mar- t Gookin, William H Taylor Mary F McMahon, Mrs. res Parker, Edward H. Willey, arles J Fox (who is also city dget commissioner).

Law department: Corporation ounsel Samuel Silverman.

Frank B. Howland, the mayor's aison man at the welfare depart- ment, was also present.

I AM DISAPPOINTED"

"I am greatly disappointed in your report, forwarded to me last night because it fails to point out specifically any irregularities in the welfare department," said Mayor Curley to Commr. Hultman, who faced him across the table.

"It is not founded in fact unless the overseers of the public welfare are liars."

He then said there was no reason why the welfare board should resort to falsehood or should refuse to co-operate with the police, as the report contended

The mayor demanded to know why Commr. Hultman claimed the welfare department was slow in handing over names for investigation. The police report had said only 2600 cases had been handed over

"The welfare department has handed over five times as many as you have reported on," said Mayor Curley.

"Investigation of those 2600 is going on all the time," was Hultman's reply. "We simply prepared these first 500 as a cross-section view of the whole situation. But we couldn't complete them. The welfare department refused to give us the records."

Mayor Curley insisted he would like to know what became of the other 2100 cases, and the matter was left there.

Commissioner Hultman told of sending his secretary and Deputy Goode to the welfare bureau to get certain information. The records were refused them.

"Who told Mr. Goode he couldn't see the records?" asked the mayor.

"Daniel Murphy, the assistant secretary of the welfare bureau," said Goode.

"Mr. Murphy told me you wanted certain information and I told him to give it to you, chimed in Chairman Hecht.

"Well," retorted Goode, "I asked for nine paycards on August 26 and I haven't got them yet."

"So far as you know, there has been no disposition in your department to refuse information to the police, has there, Mr. Hecht?" asked the mayor.

"No," replied Hecht. "We want to get information. We asked for this investigation

HULTMAN DEMANDS MORE DATA IN WELFARE PROBE

Nearly 40 Per Cent of 500 Aid Cases Prove Aliens

Commissioner Hultman's report to the mayor in the relief probe revealed that the present rate of receipt of names frfom the welfare department, it would be about a year before the police have even the names of those on the welfare list.

Of the first 500cases, nearly 40 per cent were found to be aliens.

"This involves an important matter of public policy as to how far citizens should be taxed to support aliens," the commissioner said.

Following is the complete text of the reply by Commissioner Hultman to Mayor Curley of the police investigation of individuals receiving aid from the welfare department.

Dear Mr. Mayor:

In compliance with your request of July 21, that the police department conduct an investigation for the purpose of weeding from the list of persons receiving aid from the public welfare department individuals not entitled to the same; in order to speedily purge public welfare roles of all persons receiving aid to which they are not legally entitled, and to permit of the immediate prosecution of such persons, there was at once organized in this department a special bureau in charge of a deputy superintendent to conduct the investigation requested by you, which I understand would include over 20,000 cases.

Year Needed to Receive Names at Present Rate

So far, this department has received 2685 names of persons on the welfare list, although our organization was created too speedily to take care of the preliminary investigation of the entire number of cases.

At the present rate of receipt of names from the welfare department it will be about a year before the police have even the names of those now on the welfare role, which you wish to have investigated. It would be especially helpful to this department to receive all names as soon as possible in order that the preliminary police investigation may be made promptly

This is necessary so that cases which are apparently deserving may be separated from those requiring further examination and attention. A complete list of all the names on the role of the public welfare department is absolutely essential if the police are to properly perform their duty in co-operation with your announced purpose to speedily purge the public welfare roles of all persons receiving aid to which they are not legally entitled

Speedy Probe of First Relief Cases Ordered

The first group of names of recipients of public aid supplied by the public welfare department numbering 499 were received by the police on Aug. 4. The special bureau on public aid investigation of this department was immediately instructed to take the first 500 cases received and make a thorough police investigation of each case, analyzing the resul' by dividing the cases into three groups, namely: "Possible," "worthy," "possible unworthy," "cases possible warranting prosecution," and submit the same to the superintendent of police and myself for consideration.

It was thought that this division would be the most helpful to you in determining what policy you would adopt in regard to the public aid situation in this city.

As soon as this analysis and report was made by the special bureau it was decided that before making a report to you it was desirable and necessary to check the 'possible unworthy," "possible prosecution cases" with the records of the public welfare department It was soon found that for reason enumerated later this would delay any report being made to you for an intolerable time

In view of the seriousness of the public aid situation, and in order to make a report to you at this time, the grouping was changed to "possible worthy," "possible unworthy," cases.

The analysis of the 500 cases under two heading is as follows:

Possible worthy 294.

Possible unworthy 206.

The latter class includes not only cases which from information obtained by the police warrant further consideration by the welfare authorities, but also those cases which would appear to justify prosecution against the recipient of aid or some other person concerned in the case, if the irregularities discovered by the police should be found to be accurate on comparison with the records in the public welfare department.

Under the 294 cases listed as "possible worthy" no discrepancy or question has come to the attention of the police in their preliminary investigation, and unless additional evidence is obtained indicating that further examination should be made, it would appear unnecessary to devote special attention to these cases.

Welfare Department Scored for Slowness

For this report it was intended to check the police investigation with the records of the public welfare department in all cases originally classed as "possible unworthy" and "possible cases for prosecution '

An effort was made to examine the original applications of the recipient of aid to 'check against pay cards, and to compare other records of the public welfare board with the police report where apparent irregularities were found. This work was begun last Thursday, but it is reported to me as progressing very slowly and entirely unsatisfactory to the police In fact, it has been possible to get only partial information in 25 cases up to Monday morning, whereas at least 100 cases a day should be cleaned up by comparison with the application of the recipient, a fundamental record, simple financial figures and other pertinent data which ought to be readily available.

Pay Card Check Fails to Satisfy Police

In regard to the request for copies of the pay cards in nine cases, my investigators report that four of the nine cases were returned to them with the pencil notation "not in file," but no copies of the pay cards as promised were produced in any case for the purpose of the police report.

It appears from our inability to acquire simple information that ought to be on file that the public welfare office is either unable or unwilling to furnish the police with the records necessary to complete our check within a reasonable length of time. Not until sufficient data can be secured from the public welfare office in regard to cases under the heading of "possible unworthy" will it be possible to submit to you a more definite report on the result of the police investigation.

Herewith is a summary of certain data compiled from the first 500 reports made by the police:

(Group 1)
False addresses	28
Moved	27
Vacant lots, office buildings, stables, garages, etc.	6
Recipient dead	5
Group total	66
(Group 2)
Possible owners of real estate	43
Possible bank accounts	23
Aid from other sources	58
Group total	124
(Group 3)
Difference stated aid and aid received by recipient	26
Inconsistent with basis of disbursements for persons having no dependents (according to formula should be $4 or less per week,	15
Group total	41
Number of persons with no dependents	24
Residents of Boston only since Jan. 1, 1932	6
Non residents	2
Telephones	13
Automobiles	9
Refused to answer questions by investigating officers	3
Total number having court records	101
Aliens	182
Recipients reporting that they have been not visited within the past three months by public welfare visitors or assistants	240
(Group 1)

Officers Hunt Fakers as Frauds Are Bared

In all these cases the police investigators have made diligent search to find the alleged recipient of aid. Before a definite statement can be made to you in regard to these cases the police must secure records from the public welfare department which would either show that a mistake had been made in reporting the case to the police or that there is some other reason for what appears to be a relatively large number of false and fictitious addresses or persons

(Group 2)
Possible owners of real estate possible bank accounts, aid from other sources	124

It is, of course, perfectly evident that these cases require a more careful checking of our report with those of the public welfare department

The 26 cases found by the police where the recipient reported receiving less aid than that stated by the public welfare department must be carefully checked for possible errors. Again the 15 cases inconsistent with the basis of disbursements for persons having no dependants must be carefully checked with the records of the public welfare department

The six cases of residents of Boston only since January 1, 1931, non-residents of the city of Boston and those refusing to answer questions by investigating officers should be carefully cosidered as to whether their aid should be continued.

101 Have Court Records; Many Aliens on List

The total number of persons having court records is listed as 101. These records include various crimes for which penalties were inflicted from fines, one month in jail, to state prison terms. A complete list of these cases with the criminal record of the recipient will be furnished, as it would appear that this information is necessary and should be of importance to those responsible for the granting of public aid.

It will be noted that of the 500 cases receiving public aid, 182 were aliens, or nearly 40 per cent of the entire number of cases under consideration. This involves such an important matter of public policy as to how far citizens should be taxed to support aliens that I am transmitting this information to your consideration without comment

You will also note that in 240 cases, or almost 50 per cent of the cases considered, our officers report that the recipients state that they have not been visited within the past three months, and in some cases not for two years, by a representative of the public welfare department.

More Data Required for Complete Reports

Not until sufficient data is secured from the public welfare department in regard to the cases under the heading "possible unworthy" will it be possible for the police department to submit to you a more definite report of its police investigation I felt however, that you would be interested in receiving this report of the progress which is being made by the police and the problem encountered. I am inclosing herewith a list of the names and addresses of the recipients in this group of 500 classified under the heading "possible worthy" and "possible unworthy," marked exhibit "A" and "B" respectively.

Very truly yours,
EUGENE HULTMAN.

Astrologer Adams Sees Bull Market as Eclipse Comes

York, Me., Aug 31—The stock market will be materially affected by today's eclipse, according to Miss Evangeline Adams, New York astrologer, who will witness the sun show from a local hotel

The bulls will have the upper hand in September and October as a result of the eclipse, but in November the bears will be in the scendant, Miss Adams say, and or that reason she advises persons o move cautiously. She gave no easons for reaching these concluions

RGES CAUTION

"I urge everybody to be extremely careful, particularly of heir market operations, until fter the 1st week in November ecause the eclipse may cause a very bullish market in September and October. There is danger of a very big reaction the last week in November.

"The eclipse will largely affect the financial world. I am advising everybody not to buy on margin until after the last week in November. Any stocks they obtain should be paid for outright.

"The people most likely to feel the influence of the eclipse are those born in the last week of February, May, August and November. I suggest they be very careful of what they do in business, of their health and in their relation with other persons.

DEMOCRATIC YEAR

"I think the eclipse is going to have a big effect on the coming back of the world. Look for very marked effects from the last of of November onward."

Of the presidential election she said

"This is a Democratic year and the best chance of electing a Democratic President in many years."

AIRPORT THEFT CHARGES PUT UP TO ELY

Charges of thefts at Boston airport quarters of the National Guard were made today to Gov. Ely by John W. Percy of Waltham, recently discharged [illegible]

Percy, a war veteran and father of three children, said he chose to air his charges with the governor because he feared he could not get "satisfaction" from officers of the Guard.

He said he was dismissed from the service after private records of a year's thefts were stolen from his locker at the airport.

THEFT RECORDS STOLEN

The records, he added, contained data on alleged thefts of gasoline, [illegible] empty oil drums and other articles. Shortly after his locker was broken open and the records taken he received his notice of the dismissal.

A hearing was offered him but he declined on the grounds that it was to be held before "an officer of the National Guard, whose name was in the stolen record," Percy charged.

EDSON HEARD CHARGES.

Percy was hired only for the building of the new National Guard hangar, according to Capt. Albert L. Edson, commanding officer of the National Guard detail at the airport.

"When the hangar was completed, Percy was given his notice and we appointed a man from the permanent list," Capt. Edson said.

"He did make some charges to me that thefts were occurring, but I told him I was not the man to report them to."

Penniless Children See Zoo Auctioned

San Diego, Cal., Aug. 31 (AP)—Goggle-eyed children, not one of whom had enough cash for even a monkey, were about the only interested spectators when San Diego's Zoo was put on the auction block for delinquent taxes.

The state bid the animals in for $6358, but Mrs. Belle Benchley, zoo manager, hopes they will be redeemed soon.

STORM NEARS FLORIDA

St Thomas, Virgin Islands, Aug 31 (AP)—Heavy weather with high winds, rain and a rough sea prevailed in the vicinity of the island throughout the night and continued this morning.

Small craft put into the harbors for safety, but no damage was reported.

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Weather Bureau today issued the following storm warnings:

"Advisory: 9:30 a. m., northeast storm warnings ordered 9 a. m., Carabelle, Fla, to Morgan City, La. Tropical disturbance about 150 miles south-southwest of Apalachicola, Fla., apparently moving northwest, will cause strong northeast winds this afternoon and tonight reaching gale force near center of disturbance. Tropical disturbance central about latitude 20, longitude 65½, moving slowly northwestward with increasing intensity."

Robertson Resigns Railway Head Job

Cleveland, Aug 31 (AP)—David B. Robertson has resigned as chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association and A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, was elected to succeed him.

Robertson said his only reason for resigning was to enable him to devote more time to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, of which he is president.

SIX SUN TRAINS LEAVE BOSTON

[illegible] persons crowded trains at North Station this morning, bound for vantage points in Maine and New Hampshire where the eclipse could be best observed.

Six special trains of 10 cars each pulled out of the terminal, headed for North Conway, Fryeburg and other spots in the north country.

The Harvard Club of Boston had a special of [illegible] cars, containing a party of [illegible], including a group of French scientists. Attached to the rear of the Harvard special was the private car of Irene duPont, of the Delaware duPonts, with a party of nine. The Harvard train was bound for Fryeburg.

A number of radio experts were among those leaving the North Station. They sought to learn what effect if any the eclipse would have on radios.

Several extra coaches were attached to the Yankee Flyer which stops at Portland.

Boston & Maine officials reported [illegible] weather conditions at North Conway.

Prisoner With Knife Takes Keys, Escapes

Trenton, N. J., Aug 31 (AP)—Joe Matchok, 35, of Hackensack, sentenced to 15 years for counterfeiting, escaped from the Mercer County Jail today after threatening two guards with a knife.

Harvard Prisms Set to Obtain Pictures of Solar Gases

This is the second of three articles on the eclipse written for International News Service by Miss Annie Jump Cannon, curator of astronomical photography at Harvard Observatory and known as the world's greatest woman astronomer.

By ANNIE JUMP CANNON

Copyright, 1932, by International News Service

With the Harvard University Eclipse Expedition at Gray, Me., Aug. 31 (INS)—A visit to several eclipse camps in this vicinity showed how cleverly devised are the plans for studying the surroundings of the sun.

Great prisms will refract the light of the solar gases for at least 40 seconds before and after totality so far as to obtain the coronal spectrum as soon as possible and the flash spectrum of the reversing layer.

FRAUNHOFER LINES

This belt of incandescent gases causes the dark Fraunhofer lines in the solar spectrum, lines which we see also in starlight a million years on its journey to us, lines whose duplication by means of earthly substances has taught us all we know about the composition of the universe.

If for no other reason than to satisfy the ever-persistent scientific curiosity, without which we should have no dynamos or radios today, every effort will be made to solve the puzzle of this luminosity [illegible] extend ten millions of miles out from the sun.

Although encircling a globe as hot as 6000 degrees, the corona has been found deficient in heat rays, and is in such a rarefied state that fast flying comets going at 350 miles a second, pass through it unscorched.

As to what to look for during the eclipse, with eyes guarded by a dark film except, begin to watch about 3:15 daylight time, for a tiny black notch on the western edge of the sun.

Colors on sky and land, behavior of animals, expression on people's faces are interesting.

At 3:20, look for shadows dancing hither and thither over the ground. White paper or cloth will facilitate their observation.

Green grass does not provide such a perfect ground as did the snow fields of January, 1925.

GREAT STARS OBSERVABLE

Do not look down too long. Be ready for the supreme moment when sunlight disappears, the corona streams forth and stars appear.

Jupiter will be close to the sun with the bright star Regulus. Lower down will be the planet Mercury. So near the sun, Mercury at ordinary times is always seen low in the Eastern or Western horizon, in a foggy or sunlight sky.

THIS IS LIFE

McEVOY IS LATEST OF AMERICAN HUMORISTS TO "GO TRAGIC"

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

WHAT IS IT, I wonder, that turns our humorists into serious writers, satirists or tragedians? When you stop to think of it, we have had very few born with the gift of humorous comment who are content to remain, like the Englishman, W. W. Jacobs, comedians to the last. As Carl Sandburg said in that poignant little poem about the vaudeville actor: "They all want to play Hamlet." Even Charles Chaplin is credited with that ambition. And John Barrymore, who started as the lightest of light comedians, did actually achieve that ambition.

PROF. ROGERS

Mark Twain, funniest of them all, ended his days as the bitterest of pessimists, the wild, extravagant humor of his early days curdled into a sardonic nihilism that thought it would be a good thing if there could be another flood—and all the human race drowned. And our contemporary Ring Lardner, who began with a hilarious series about minor league baseball players who shaved their necks, was presently writing short stories, funny enough, but full of keen scorn for the pitiful examples of homo sapiens—man the sap—he was exhibiting.

He's Doing What Dickens Did

This same acidosis of the spiritual stomach is apparently conquering the keenest observer of our American scene, one J. P. McEvoy, humorist and satirist, who knows several limited angles of our life with extraordinary thoroughness and can report it with constant ingenuity and veracity. And in the old days with side-splitting humor. He has been in the greeting card business, the newspaper business, the musical show business, the sound talkies, and recently, the radio racket. And he has reported the inside workings of each one of them in a novel.

He made his reputation with "Show Girl" and "Show Girl Hollywood," two stories about the show business, full of screamingly funny detail about rehearsals and behind the scene intrigue which at the same time was implicit criticism. When he married Dixie Dugan and took her abroad, he became more sardonic. Now I have just finished reading his latest, "Are You Listening" (Houghton Mifflin Co.), all about what goes on inside the works of Radioland.

The purists, like Mrs. Wharton and Miss Cather, probably retch a little at Mr. McAvoy, just as the old-fashioned lady in "Cranford," who was brought up on Samuel Johnson's Rasselas," retched at "Sketches by Boz" by a young unknown named Charles Dickens. But McEvoy is doing for America precisely what Dickens did for England in the thirites and forties.

More and more he is turning to a pure dramatic technic in telling his story. As a matter of fact he has written and produced two amusing revues, "Americana," which were "different." There may be another this fall. Always he has told his story in the dialect of the street, the newspaper office, the show shop, the Broadway column, and so on. He has told it in elaborate exchanges of telegrams, in tabloid paragraphs, in Sobol-Winchell wise cracks, in fragments of popular songs, in peppy dialogue. The new book "Are You Listening" is pure dialogue, punctuated with bits of radio programs and relentlessly plugged song hits.

Bedlam Brings on Tragedy

There is fun in it, of course, but it is pretty savage sort of fun. Most of it is to be found in the burlesques—although burlesque is too strong a word—of the dreadful blah ladled out hour after hour in the commercial programs of a great radio station. The sense of the relentless pressure of the program, hour after hour, day after day, makes you want to scream and turn off the dials. If you are in the studio you are hearing a rehearsal or an audition or a program going on all the time. At home, too, there is always the radio, or a neighbor's radio. In the night club, it never lets up. The whole sorry and tragic drama of the novel is played to this ghastly and intolerable obligato of threadbare, outworn, rehashed, deadly stuff.

To the noise of the radio you watch the slow degeneration of the two sisters of Sally who is reception clerk and of Laura who fills in by singing "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life" at every appropriate and inappropriate time. And of the the little sister Honey who comes to New York to live the night-club life—and succeeds. And the angry-tempered continuity writer who loses his job because he is too inventive. And his shrewish wife who suspects his love affairs with Laura. And the song-writer who believes that all programs should turn on the theme of Love, and the Judge who broadcasts about crime and the sanctity of the home and likes plenty of fresh young girls on his parties.

Every single one of them with nerves frayed and jangling from the incessant noise, never-ending necessity to whip tired brains and produce novelties that will please business men who and interested only in getting their products named as often as possible in 15 minutes. At the end Bill, driven crazy by noisy radio and a noisier wife, kills her accidently, tries to escape with the faithful Laura (who doesn't get a single break throughout the story), and is caught by a combination tabloid-radio "stunt" of broadcasting the search for the murderer all over the United States. So he is caught in his own trap, hoist by his own petard, another triumph of a mechanical age.

Strips All Off of Broadcasting

The poor old mother of the three girls is left to eat her Christmas dinner alone in Hickville with the struggling young lawyer whom Honey deserted for the bright lights—and the story ends on a distinct'y minor key. That, Mr. McEvoy seems to say, what modern inventions—especially radio—do to the home life of America.

And the book is bitter as it possibly can be. Mr. McEvoy seems intent on stripping every particle of genuineness, of honesty, of intelligence from the radio broadcasting industry and exhibiting it at nothing more or less than a racket, wherein clever young men with their tongues in their cheeks invent absurd continuities for stupid business men who have no idea of the true function of entertainment in publicity. For instance:

"How the devil does anybody know how many people listen-in to a program? How can they find out? And yet I can prove conclusively to old man Hutzpah how many will listen-in and just where they are and how old they are and whether they've had a bath or not. To prove my point I may have to lay the Empire State Building and old man Hutzpah end to end.' And why not?

"Business men drive me crazy. Just because they know how to make bathtubs or dog biscuits, they think they know how to make entertainments. You ought to hear Hutzpah and Carson argue as to which would sell more bathtubs, Toscanini or Paul Whiteman. What in God's name I can cook up for that account? It's got to have human appeal. It mustn't cost too much. And it must be better than Amos 'n' Andy. That's all they want.

But what they get is the Eureka Exterminator Light Opera Company, presenting imitations of Gilbert and Sullivan without using those nasty b-db-g or c-chr-ch, or the New Art Plumbing Company presenting Maeterlinck's "Pelleas and Melisande" with the famous well scene laid in a New Art Plumbing Company's tinted bathtub. That's what they get—and they don't like it! But the public eats it up!

ELY PUSHES CAMPAIGN FOR ROOSEVELT

G.O.P. ATTACKED BY GOVERNOR AT HULL

500 Hear Plea for Democratic Ticket at Brilliant Reception in Sampson Home

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Specifically mentioning Roosevelt and Garner by name, Governor Ely placed himself squarely behind the Democratic national ticket in an address delivered to 500 South Shore residents following a reception at the Hull home of Maj. and Mrs. Edward J. Sampson.

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, vice-chairman of the Democratic national committee and former governor of Wyoming, share the reception honors with the governor.

MAKE FACTS FIT PURPOSE

Ely charged the Republicans with attempting to set up facts and conditions to suit their own purposes for the campaign and of trying to evade the failures and shortcomings of the administration for the last three years.

The governor was caustic in his condemnation of the wet-dry position of the Republican national ticket on the prohibition question. He asserted that the plank in the G. O. P. platform was written by President Hoover or with his assent.

In touching upon his own administration, the governor said that he had heard that the present Democratic administration on Beacon Hill has been very extravagant and that wonderful things will be done when the Republicans get in, cutting down expenses.

PROUD OF DECREASE

Yet, he pointed out, since Governor Walsh's time, the cost of government in Massachusetts under Republican governors—all fine men—increased every single year.

While that cost continued to increase because of necessary work embarked upon for the relief of unemployment, the governor admitted, this year for the first time in 14 years, expenses have been brought down below the previous year

"There was less this year than in either of the years of Governor Allen's administration," he said. "I am proud of that record."

In reminding that he was regarded as "crazy" from a political angle, the Governor revealed his amusement at the placards now being displayed by candidates for office pledging devotion to the cause of economy in government.

TRIBUTE TO GARNER

Former Governor Ross of Wyoming paid a glowing tribute to that "grand old statesman" Speaker Garner, candidate for the vice-presidency. It was Speaker Garner, she declared, who called a halt to the Republicans "who were spending money like drunken sailors." It was not until he appointed a committee on economy, she contended, that President Hoover and the rest of them all joined in the hue and cry for a reduced budget.

BOY, 15, HELD IN DEATH OF HIS GRANDMOTHER

Application for Manslaughter Warrant Is Deferred in Brighton Court

Application for a warrant charging Harold Hawkins, 15, with manslaughter, as the result of the death of his grandmother, Mrs. Susan Hawkins, 69, of 19 Bigelow st., Brighton, Aug. 15, was continued when the case came up in Brighton court today.

Special Officer Joseph McGuire made application for a warrant from Court Clerk Daniel J. Cunningham, but Cunningham suggested the case be continued until after receipt of the report of the medical examiner showing exact cause of death

Young Hawkins was not in court when the proceedings took place. He remained at Shirley School, a corrective institution for boys, where he has been since shortly after his grandmother's injury that later resulted in death

The woman died after her grandson pushed her when he complained of stale bread at the breakfast table on Aug. 5. In the fall she suffered a fracture of the leg and other injuries and succumbed in City Hospital.

Two days later Hawkins was picked up by Brighton probation officers and sent to Shirley school on a suspended sentence received in July for being a stubborn child

According to police, the boy and a brother have been reared by an uncle and the gradmother since they were orphaned.

Hawkins told police he pushed his grandmother when she tried to hit him with a ruler.

TRAIN WRECKER ARREST NEAR

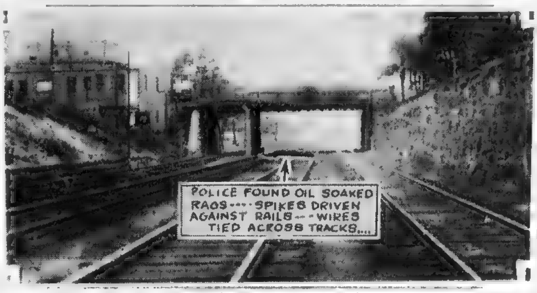
Arrests are expected within a few hours, investigators said today, in the plot to wreck a Boston & Maine train in Chelsea which was thwarted after the suspicious actions of the wreckers had been noted by a gate-tender.

Discharged employes are under suspicion, and Chelsea police are co-operating with railroad detectives in finding them.

It was revealed today that a conductor on a Boston-bound train yesterday afternoon first foiled the plotters when he saw them by the side of the tracks under the Washington ave. bridge.

He told Philip Davis, gate tender at the Arlington st. crossing in Chelsea. The men vanished but returned later to complete their work

SCENE OF ATTEMPTED TRAIN WRECK



POLICE FOUND OIL SOAKED RAGS---SPIKES DRIVEN AGAINST RAILS---WIRES TIED ACROSS TRACKS...

The place shown above on the B. & M. tracks between Washington ave. bridge and Broadway, Chelsea, was the scene of what police believe to be an amazing attempt to wreck a train. Philip Davis, gate-tender, says he saw four men acting suspiciously at this point and called the police. The officers found spikes driven into the ties with heavy strands of wire stretched across the rails. Oil-soaked rags were found nearby which, police believe, were to be used to set fire to train after it had been wrecked

Sergt. Edward Forbes of the Chelsea police, who led a detail of officers to the scene of what is believed was an attempt to wreck a B. & M. train, Chelsea and railroad police are investigating the case.

Aged Foes Refuse to Shake in Court After Battle

They may be along in years and white-haired, but there still is plenty of action in Fernando Wood, 73, and John E. Anderson, 67, both of Overland in the Winnmere section of Burlington

They appeared before Judge Morton in Woburn court today on charges of mutual assault, and even when the judge continued the case and recommended they shake hands, they went out of the court room growling at each other

The argument started when Wood and his wife interfered with Anderson while he was taking some old lumber which the children of both men were using to build a hut in a vacant lot on Overland ave. The assault occurred during the argument and neighbors summoned State Trooper George C Barker of the Reading Barracks, who took the pair down to court

According to Wood, Anderson grabbed him by the throat

According to Anderson, Wood hit him with a piece of lumber

According to the judge, both men must keep the peace hereafter

Another Kidnaping Myth Is Exploded

Police investigating the reported kidnaping of a man in Hemenway st., last night, learned today it was nothing more serious than bringing a sick man to his home

Sergeants Edward Twohig and Manuel Suzan of the Back Bay station talked with the man in whose name the so-called kidnap car was registered and found that he was carrying the invalid to Lowell.

Son of Ex-Mayor Fighting Paralysis

Hope for complete recovery of John Peters, 17, son of ex-Mayor Andrew J. Peters, who was stricken with infantile paralysis at the Peters summer home in Maine, was held out at the Phillips House where he is a patient today.

DELAY GILLETTE FEE HEARING

Arguments on the matter of $275,000 fees for counsel for the plaintiffs in the recently settled Gillette suit were listed for hearing before Judge Field in Supreme Court today—but they weren't heard

And when they will be heard now is somewhat of a delicate problem for Judge Field declined jurisdiction, refused to continue the case and ordered it off the court list after he had been told there was an agreement to have it heard by Judge Lummus the new member of the Supreme Court, on Saturday

H. B Ehrmann, one of the many lawyers for the plaintiffs in the $21,000,000 suit of minority stockholders against the Gillette directors, asked a formal continuance until Saturday.

"No, the case will go off the list," ruled Judge Field. "You will make arrangements for hearing it with any judge you see fit."

SIX SERGEANTS SHEA BEARERS

The funeral of Police Sergt. Dennis Shea of Station 16, who died Saturday following an operation in City Hospital, was held this morning from his home at 104 Pleasant st., Dorchester

A detail of 36 officers led by Sergt. Edward A. Moore preceded the cortege to St. William's Church where a solemn requiem mass was sung by the Rev. Roger McCann of St. Joseph's Church, Wollaston, a nephew of the deceased

The musical program was under direction of Miss Helen Griffin.

Six police sergeants acted as pall bearers. They are: Patrick Morrissey, Benjamin Wall, Frank Maguire, Henry Bailey, Manuel Suzzane and Morris Sullivan

A large number of friends and police associates, including Supt. Crowley, filled the church and followed the procession of 20 cars, with motorcycle escort, to Holy Cross cemetery where interment services were held

DRY AGENTS AND POLICE FOIL A BOLD PLAN

2000 Gallons of High-Test Alcohol Were Transported From New Jersey

A bold daylight attempt to run a load of New Jersey alcohol into Chelsea, involving a daring change of truck drivers in the midst of traffic on Broadway, was frustrated by suspicious dry agents and Chelsea police today.

After a wild chase through side streets in Chelsea, the relief driver followed the example of his predecessor and fled, both making their escape. The van was captured and was found to contain 2000 gallons of high test alcohol, valued at $4000 wholesale.

A party of dry agents headed by William Craig was headed for Chelsea in an automobile when on Chelsea st., Charlestown, they became suspicious of a closed furniture van bearing New Jersey plates.

The agents trailed the van across the Chelsea line to Broadway, where, apparently by prearrangement, the driver of the truck pulled up to the curb and stopped where another man was waiting.

The driver jumped to the sidewalk and fled, while the man standing at the curb mounted to his seat and started the van in motion, driving along Broadway to Spruce st. In the meantime the agents had notified Chelsea police, and a motorcycle officer and a patrolman joined the chase. In Spruce st., the cycle officer overtook the van, but the driver disregarded his whistle to stop and sped on. In Elm st., however, he brought the van to a stop, and ran through back yards, getting away. Police believe the relief driver was a local man familiar with Chelsea side streets, who intended to take the van to some garage.

Deer Island Folk Study Gulls in Dark

The 757 inmates at Deer Island House of Correction were to be allowed out on the grounds today by permission of Maj. George F. A. Mulcahy, master of the House of Correction, to view the eclipse. Maj. Mulcahy asked the inmates to observe the actions of the harbor gulls during the eclipse. Huge flocks of gulls are in the vicinity of Deer Island every day, and hundreds sometimes crowd the rocks of the shore.

Students to See Sun from Observatory

Eclipse observations will be made by meteorological students at the Blue Hill observatory at the invitation of weather officials. The observatory is located at one of the highest spots south of Boston

Phone In News Tips, Liberty 4000, and Win $50 in Weekly Prizes

Do you want to make some money for being alert? If so, the Boston Evening American is presenting the opportunity. Every week a total of $50 in prizes will be offered for news tips telephoned in to the American News-Tip Editor at Liberty 4000. And what is a news tip? It's the information that something of interest to the people of Greater Boston and adjacent cities has taken place or will take place. Do you know, for instance, that an important meeting is scheduled for a certain date, that an accident has happened, that there is going to be a business merger, that a celebrity is coming to town? That's a news tip. There will be given $25 weekly for the best first exclusive news tip received, $10 for the next best, $5 for the next best and $1 prizes for each of the 10 next most valuable tips. The first tip on a story wins. Do not send in minor stories that everyone sees. Good exclusive pictures are wanted, too.

COAST GUARDSMEN MUST SETTLE FOR MISSING LIQUORS

PAY SLASH FOR PAIR INVOLVED IN RUM LOSS

Hull Men Notified Pay Will Be $15 Instead of $90 Until Further Notice

The South Shore coast guard situation reached into the pocketbooks of enlisted men today.

Following closely upon the discharge of three guardsmen and the demotion of two others, it was learned today that others have received cuts in pay for alleged complicity in the disappearance of seized liquor.

Two of the punished guardsmen received notices at the Hull station that their pay was reduced from $90 a month to $15 a month until further notice.

Stations at Scituate, Sagamore, Woods Hole and others between Boston and Cape Cod, were known to have been effected similarly, but none would admit they received the gloomy notifications.

It was generally believed by guardsmen that the investigators from Washington have returned to the Capital but guardsmen, recently assigned to the district, were watched closely in the fear they might be part of the system.

POLICE HOAXED IN KIDNAPING

Police Chief Michael T. Hughe of Newton, learned today that somebody has been spoofing him regarding the presence, in California, of Mrs. Constance S. Ferguson of Waban, who is a fugitive from a warrant charging her with kidnaping her 4½-year-old son Scott, Jr.

After receiving a telegram purporting to come from Sheriff Walter Sellmer, who wired he had located Mrs. Ferguson in San Rafael, Calif., the chief conferred with Dist. Atty. Bishop.

They decided not to spend the money to send an officer to California, but to see what could be done about prosecuting Mrs. Ferguson on the Pacific Coast.

So the chief sent a wire to Sheriff Sellmer instructing him not to arrest Mrs. Ferguson, and Sheriff Sellmer wired right back that he didn't even know her, hadn't heard of her and hadn't sent any previous wire.

Chief Hughes is somewhat concerned about the hoax inasmuch as there now is no clue to the whereabouts of Mrs. Ferguson and her son, who vanished from Newton last week.

DRUG GIRL GOES FREE ON PLEDGE

On her promise to cure herself [illegible] the drug habit, Mrs. Margaret L. [illegible]grove, 32, former owner of a [illegible]ell beauty parlor today was [illegible]ed on probation for a year in [illegible]nicipal court.

She must still face charges in federal court, however, of violating the Harrison Narcotic Act.

Mrs. Cosgrove, arrested in a South End lodging house yesterday, repeated in court today a story that she had been lured to a drug habit at several North Shore resorts.

Police charged her with possession of 50 grains of narcotics and three hypodermic needles.

"If you are given a chance do you think you can make anything of yourself and return to the life you led before drugs got you?" inquired Judge John Duff.

"Your Honor, I am sure I can cure myself," was the response.

After probation was ordered, Mrs. Cosgrove left with two women friends.

At the time of her arrest she told police she attended North Shore parties with a wealthy Lynn man and that several girls in the parties had secretly been given dope that gradually converted them into addicts.

BLAST ON BOAT PERILS WOMAN

A small motorboat anchored in the harbor off P st., Hull, was the scene of much excitement today as an explosion from an unidentified source and the fire following it caused a crowd to gather along the waterfront and the Hull fire department to be called.

Mrs. Florence Bresin of T st., Hull, owner of the boat, was alone on board when the explosion took place. Four men, Thomas Gilodeau, Harry Cleveny, Thomas Cunningham and William Hogan, all of Nantasket, leaped into a small boat and towed the craft ashore where the fire was extinguished.

Petitions Bankruptcy

John L. Emery of North Main st., Brockton, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the U. S. district court disclosing liabilities of $155,619.15.

MAYOR HAS WARRING POLICE AND DOLE HEADS ON GRILL

Here is Mayor Curley taking action to end the conflict between police officials and members of the Public Welfare Commission with a view of getting results from the investigation which has exposed widespread fraud among dole recipients. Following Police Commissioner Hultman's report, which is published in today's Boston Evening American and which Corp. Counsel Silverman brands a "police alibi," Mayor Curley called the police and dole heads on the carpet. In photo seated facing the mayor, from left to right, are Bernard Scanlon, secretary to Hultman; Commissioner Hultman, Supt. Crowley, William H. Taylor, of welfare board; Nathan Heller, of welfare board; Chairman Simon E. Hecht of welfare board, and Charles J. TWO SALESMEN CHARGED WITH $500 SWINDLE

Roxbury Woman Victimized by Pair Soliciting Help for Missions

Two "seminarians," alleged to have duped a Roxbury woman of more than $500, were arrested today after a search of more than a month.

The victim, Mrs. Rose Mosel of Highland st., Roxbury, identified them as the pair to whom she gave most of her life savings for outfitting a church in China, police said.

Arrested separately at their homes, the two men gave their names as Joseph Ochs, 45, of Dysart st., Quincy, and Francis H. Bishop, 42, of Lakeview st., Waltham.

BOTH DENY SWINDLE

Both denied they had swindled Mrs. Mosel and both claimed they were legitimate salesmen of religious magazines.

Frank A. Slater of the Burns detective agency and Special Officer John Dever of the Roxbury Crossing station, who worked together on the case, reported they were hampered for a time when Mrs. Mosel refused to believe she had been swindled.

She later told them the two men received numerous donations of five and ten dollars and then drove her to a Roxbury bank so she could draw $160 for a chalice.

A few days later, Mrs. Mosel reported she drew $332.84 to finance the carving of her name on the alter of a church at Peking, China. The $2.84 was returned to her.

PAIR TO FACE LINEUP

In the belief that others may have been swindled, police broadcast a teletype message to the Greater Boston area that a lineup will be held at police headquarters tomorrow morning.

Meanwhile, Ochs and Bishop are specifically charged with larceny from Mrs. Mosel.

Aged Swimmer Dies at Coleridge Beach

Albert Wood, 73, of 114 Cowper st., East Boston, died in the water today while bathing at the foot of Coleridge st., East Boston, in the Harbor View section.

Mrs. Lillian Miles of Shore st., East Boston, and Miss Mildred Hubbard of Cowper st., who saw him collapse, pulled him out. Police and firemen worked over the body for more than an hour.

Mrs. Henry Pratt McKean admiring the lotus flower exhibited by Mrs. William H. Morse at the annual flower show at Horticultural Hall, Manchester-by-the-Sea.

MRS. GRIESS MRS HUBBARD

Among the guests at the North Shore flower show were Mrs. Justin Griess, her two children and Mrs. Richard Hubbard, Jr., the former Betty Moulton. Not only are rare and beautiful blossoms on exhibit, but vegetables and garden set[illegible] on display. Many of the North Shore colony attended the opening of the show.

FRANCES HUTCHINSON MRS. HUTCHINSON

Frances Hutchinson is shown with her mother, Mrs. Sidney Hutchinson, at the flower show. This event annually attracts the elite of the North Shore.

BEACON HILL

WE GAZED INTO THE HEART OF A LOTUS BLOSSOM yesterday and feel our life has been enriched thereby . . . to think that Nature can create so perfect a blossom from the mud and slime of stagnant pools strengthens our belief in the flowering of our spirit after a life among the murky mists of this earth.

* * *

No one viewing this revelation of precious beauty could wonder that the ancients worshipped it as the sacred flower . . . so pure is its waxen cup, so blushing its fragile petals.

* * *

Mrs. William H. Moore, of Pride's Crossing, was the exhibitor of this wonder-flower at the North Shore Horticultural Society's annual flower show at Manchester-by-the-Sea and hundreds stopped to admire the grace and coloring of this gorgeous water plant.

MRS. MAX TALBOT

* * *

THERE WERE OTHER rare lilies floating about the queen of the waters . . . lavender and pink and cream color . . . a truly lovely and unusual display.

* * *

Dahlias Brilliant

FOR QUALITY, WE HAVE never seen a more beautiful show of blossoms, gladiolas, dahlias, roses, zinias, and flowering plants.

* * *

THE DAHLIAS WERE LIKE dazzling suns, at dawn, at midday, and when the sun takes on the radiant orange to gold at sunset . . . we gazed and could not get our fill of gazing at them.

* * *

OUTSIDE OF THE HALL, in a large tent, the various garden clubs had executed garden settings . . . a particularly lovely one was a Chinese Pagoda entrance, with moon-shaped doorway filled with real Chinese plants and flowers . . . mimosa dripped from the eaves . . . the passionate hibiscus clambored on the trellises to reach a little Chinese thrush which was singing in a tiny thatched cage . . . rare green vines festooned the pink stucco walls in which was set the loveliest of lovely jade tiles, to serve as windows . . . the whole was a bit of China as we imagine her.

* * *

MRS. NORTON, WIFE OF Professor Norton, and responsible with Mrs. Max Talbot and Mrs. Lawrence Brown for this garden gem, told us that the jade tiles were an imitation of actual tiles brought from China many years ago by the Hon. Robert Bennett Forbes, of Milton and the little scene was one which was actually in existence in China.

* * *

AMONG THE FLOWER-LOVERS was Mrs. Norton Wigglesworth of Milton [illegible] She was [illegible] fashionable black and white.

* * *

WE HAD A CHAT WITH Mrs. Richard Hubbard (Betty Moulton), of Hamilton and Beacon st., and her artistic mother, Mrs. "Jack" Moulton, [illegible] North Shore.

* * *

IT IS ALWAYS A PLEASURE to see Betty Hubbard [illegible] charming [illegible] no affectations [illegible] ily understand her great popularity in the [illegible] Junior League.

* * *

Inferiority Complex

WHICH IS QUITE IN CONTRAST to the manner of Mrs. Henry Powning of South [illegible] Manchester, who feels it incumbent to uphold her social position by being haughty and rude . . . not skilled enough in business acumen to value publicity for such a worthy enterprise as the North Shore Flower Show . . .

* * *

MRS. WILLIAM DEXTER also behaved like Little Red Riding Hood running away from the wolf when she saw the camera man . . . such an inferiority complex is too pathetic!

* * *

TWO LOVELY FAIR THINGS who resembled the blossoms surrounding them were Mrs. Leslie Buswell and her sister-in-law, Mrs. W. H. Robinson, Jr., of Pittsburgh. Mrs. Robinson is visiting her well known relatives and was quite bewitching in a pale boucle knit of blush color and matching hat. Mrs. Buswell's dark beauty was set off by a red and white print and large picture hat.

Activities of the Fashionables at Gay Summer Resorts

The Longwood tennis attracted a large gathering of social lights from both the North and South Shores.

Among the notables were Mrs. Charles Hibbard looking very chic in a brown and white [illegible] frock and a broad brimmed [illegible] de-rose hat that was [illegible] becoming and afforded shade while watching the matches. Mrs. Hibbard before her marriage was Miss Grace Cushing.

Then there was her sister, the lovely Miss Ellen Cushing, of Milton, who wore a large white hat with a brim that dipped [illegible] over her dark eyes and dusky hair. She looked lovely and seemed to be greatly enjoying the afternoon's activities. Well, really who wouldn't when aware of how "just right" she looked in a figured rose and white silk frock with white [illegible] shoes that finished off her very modish costume.

A Cardiff Admirer

He was determined to see not only the beautiful and historical north of Wales, but the dreary southern section of that little land, black with mining towns, unromantic in contrast to its upper portion. He has high praise for Cardiff, a town which most travelers avoid; yet it is the leading city of Wales, containing more than half of the country's population.

Close to it is Heartbreak Valley, where you will see pits whose chimneys no longer smoke and the men who want work, and can only [illegible] at street corners because they were born and bred to [illegible]

I am looking out on some lovely Connecticut woods as I write this, but my heart, I fear, is on the green Isle of Anglesey so far away.

VALENTINE

An Exciting Story of Modern Love

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Aunt Julia Begins to Worry About the Future of Val Because of Her Beauty

THE STORY SO FAR

Valentine Macfarlane is the shy, dreamy daughter of Millie Macfarlane, a widow, whose gay, romantic nature is not spoiled by poverty. Millie goes to the Orient, and Val is taken to her Aunt Julia's. The years pass and Val finds herself falling in love with Joe Carey, her girlhood playmate. He takes her to the senior prom.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

TEARS of self-pity stood in her eyes. She saw them and was ashamed of herself. After all Aunt Julia had done for her, after her luck in actually getting to her senior class dance, and getting all her dances!

She went into [illegible] herself [illegible] Queen [illegible] and she went to bed.

The book wasn't [illegible] what Aunt [illegible] had [illegible] Val read avidly, putting herself in the heroine's place. She was [illegible] and fell asleep to [illegible] happy again in her [illegible]

"Did you have a good time, Val?"

[illegible] streamed through the open windows, fell warmly on Val's bed [illegible] up, blinking.

"My, but I'm lazy! Why didn't you call me sooner? I didn't intend to sleep all day. Oh! Aunt JULIA! You DIDN'T have to bring my breakfast to bed!"

WHAT'S FOOLISH

"Thought you'd be half dead after that silly dance," Aunt Julia said, gruffly, and set down the tray. She was afraid she was spoiling the girl, bringing her hot biscuits and ham omelet, letting her sleep till noon. And as usual that fear made her gruff.

"Oh, I'm not tired—just lazy," Val said easily, but a shadow flitted across her face. Joe . . . Joe had failed her.

"It was late enough when you got home. I dropped off about 1. You weren't home yet."

"The dance wasn't over until 1!"

"I hope you came straight home. There's no sense in staying out after 12. It doesn't look right. I hope that Joey Carey didn't try to act foolish."

"What's foolish?"

"You know what I mean, Valentine Macfarlane. I guess I know how they act nowadays. That's one reason why I go to the movies, to keep up with the times. Let me tell you, you can't trust them—not one."

[illegible] that had [illegible] Val's face at the mention of Joe ebbed away. Her lips twitched. "Oh, Aunt Julia, you do say such funny things! You don't think Joe wanted to run away with me, do you?"

"Run off with you! Not this generation. They wouldn't take [illegible] much of a chance. Too selfish. I know them, too. He's as bad as the rest, or he will be, if he ever gets away from his mother long enough. No, they won't run away with you. All they do is paw you and slobber all over you. That's cheap—and safe!

"Val, if I thought you'd let Joe Carey or any one of those gangly boys with vaseline all over their heads, carry on like that with you, I'll—I don't know what I'd do!"

"YES, JOE'S SAFE."

Val gulped her coffee. "You see too many flaming youth pictures," [illegible] laughing.

[illegible] Aunt [illegible] Well, maybe I do. I just want to warn you, that's all. But I guess I don't have to worry. You're like me, Val, not the kind to get into trouble with boys."

"Yes, I'm like you. And you need not worry about Joe. He's safe."

[illegible] Maybe [illegible] when Val was [illegible]

"At normal, you'll meet a different class altogether. Not so flighty," she said briskly, rising to take the tray.

[illegible]

[illegible] different [illegible] Joe [illegible] Wednesday [illegible] Strange what a few [illegible] when [illegible] without being followed [illegible] autographs [illegible] the streets unnoticed and perhaps [illegible]

[illegible] Dear Aunt [illegible] one thing [illegible] wouldn't [illegible]

[illegible] back to the [illegible] and Joe [illegible] Val wouldn't want her [illegible]

She [illegible] with [illegible] On a steamer bound for [illegible] people [illegible]

[illegible] the edge of the bed [illegible]

"Oh dear Lord, protect her, she's too pretty . . . much too pretty," [illegible] the episode in the Carey kitchen.

WHAT'S A KISS

"Oh, what's a kiss! Don't be so blamed old fashioned!" [illegible] snapped [illegible] outraged [illegible]

I was probably [illegible] didn't mean much . . . for other [illegible]

But for her, Val, for Val [illegible] different.

And that wasn't the worst of it [illegible] thing [illegible] not know it!

[illegible] on the rocker in the kitchen to read over Millie's last letter.

[illegible] she folded it up and said a little prayer.

"Dear Lord, you keep Millie away from her for another year or two, until she gets past this silly age, and I won't ask for anything else. I'll handle the rest somehow. But keep Millie away another year—just one more year, Lord, please!"

[illegible] began.

"Well, that's done!" Aunt Julia wheezed, walking home.

Val felt for the diploma in her [illegible]

"Now you've got it, what you going to do with it?" Frank Vogel had asked, and everybody had laughed. Now she wondered.

[illegible] commencement [illegible] Lots of people had congratulated her, told her how sweet she looked.

"Getting to be a great, big, beautiful!" Marjorie's father [illegible] the supervisor [illegible]

Up to the last moment Val [illegible] some word from Millie [illegible] something. But Millie [illegible] have forgotten. There was [illegible] Nothing.

Joe was there with his mother and the rest of the family [illegible] Betty [illegible] Joe forced his way through the crowd to congratulate Val. Joe was friendly [illegible] He seemed to like her as much as ever.

It wasn't enough [illegible] she wanted something more.

"I should have had a little party for you!" Aunt Julia said, seeming to sense Val's disappointment. "Pshaw! Why didn't I think of it! I could have invited Marjorie, and two or three of the other girls. What a pity!"

Val smiled and shook her head. [illegible] as if Marjorie would come [illegible] as if ANY [illegible] would have come to a GIRLS' party.

So Aunt Julia insisted on going to the Sweet Shoppe for sodas. Then they went home and went to bed.

• • •

When summer was half over and [illegible] she couldn't picture [illegible] any longer [illegible] Aunt Julia [illegible] wouldn't become [illegible] teacher.

"Well, what do you want to do?" Aunt Julia asked [illegible]

"Oh, I don't know," Val said evasively. "Office work, I guess."

She really wanted to go on the stage. Millie had been on the stage [illegible] years ago. Val used to [illegible] when she and Ma[illegible] went to matinees at the [illegible] Sometimes they walked back and forth on Franklin street after the matinee was over, waiting to see the actors and actresses come out of the stage entrance.

MATINEE IDOL

They often saw the [illegible] and the man who played [illegible] part, and some of the other [illegible] ones, but [illegible] saw the leading [illegible] and then she was [illegible] disappointed, and the only time the [illegible] leading man Val was [illegible] look at him and [illegible] the street at a [illegible]

Val thought she was in love with him some times. Sometimes she would pretend to Aunt Julia that she hadn't been to the matinee with Marjorie and then she [illegible] Aunt Julia would go in [illegible]

[illegible] forehead [illegible] the dark soft wings of her hair. In the darkness [illegible] scenes when he looked [illegible] audience and she thought he was looking right at her she [illegible] uncomfortably, so that Aunt Julia stopped munching her [illegible] taffy and said "Gracious, Val, don't fidget."

Val's longing after commencement is for the stage. In tomorrow's chapter.

Hindu Suffragette Brands Women of America for Lack of Individualism

HINDU SUFFRAGETTE

[illegible] Mrs. Mayadevi Gangulee [illegible] has come [illegible] the pre[illegible] idea of social and political conditions existing in India.

"How can there be culture or society in a country where everything is measured in terms of dollars?" she asks.

SPIRITUAL WEALTH

In India, Mrs. Gangulee explained [illegible] wealth of a spiritual nature [illegible] the real essence of life.

"That is why our aristocracy doesn't fluctuate and is not affected by economic curses," she said.

In her bright costume of India silk [illegible] appears [illegible] feet with long [illegible] earrings swinging from her ears [illegible] the vermilion caste mark of her [illegible] on her forehead, she discussed American women.

COPY NEIGHBORS

"In your homes, your clothes, figures and even faces, you all strive to be a copy of your neighbor, disregarding any individuality," Mrs. Gangulee criticised. "To me, you are like your skyscrapers, tall, angular, all harsh lines, devoid of curves."

Mrs. Gangulee believes women should participate actively in politics [illegible] politics deal with [illegible] humanity. A woman's judgment [illegible] in passing laws [illegible] be sound because she will consider whether they will benefit or harm her children and be governed accordingly.

"There are many things about this country, that India should admire and copy," she said, "but there are also many things that she can benefit by leaving alone."

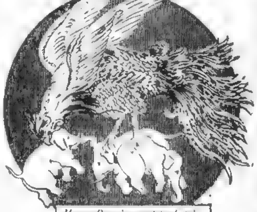
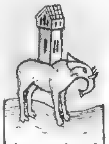
Fantastic Tales of Travelers in Early Days Which Were Accepted Because Nobody Could Deny Them

THE average person in earlier days had almost no real knowledge about anything a few hundred miles from his doorstep. This was because there were no newspapers, magazines, telegrams or even mails. Books were scarce, indeed; few people could read at all.

The only contact most of our ancestors had with distant lands was through reports made by travelers on their return. And since few of these tales could have been checked up, the early travelers let their imagination run wild.



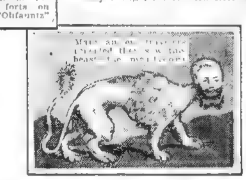
Marco Polo brought back tales of a big bird powerful enough to carry an elephant in each of its claws and in its beak



One traveler of yore told of an Eastern potentate whose defense included forts on 14,000 "Olifauntz"

What Happened?

The result was that the heads of our ancestors were stuffed full of the most ridiculous and terrifying general misinformation. They knew a great deal, but most of it just didn't happen to be true. And they had themselves to blame for many of the lies they heard. They seemed to welcome exaggerations. Curiously enough, the few travelers scoffed at were those who were honest in describing the unfamiliar things they had seen.



Many an old traveler [illegible] he saw this beast [illegible]

See for Yourself!

Some examples of the tales actually believed in the days of the first travelers are shown above and on the left. Many more are given in an entertaining article appearing in The American Weekly, next Sunday. Be sure to read it!

EDUCATION FIRST, THEN MARRIAGE

Don't Wed Until Future Is Assured

By Beatrice Fairfax

Tragic Thing for Boy Without Training for Life Work to Rush Into Matrimony

THIS IS THE time of the year when I begin to get letters from girls and boys, asking if they should get married or keep on with school and college. And if they're under age, or short on education, I always beg them to keep on with school and have a better equipment before they take on the responsibilities of marriage.

It is an absolutely tragic thing for a boy who has no profession, trade or proper training for earning a living to marry. Perhaps he has been able to pick up some hand-to-mouth job during the summer vacation, it pays fairly well, and under the influence of a pair of [illegible] eyes, moonlight and the [illegible] urge to love, he decides to quit school and get married.

TROUBLE BEGINS

He may keep the job for a few months, then some change in the management or the boy himself failing due to anxiety over his new responsibilities—and the job is gone. These unskilled hand-to-mouth jobs are hard to find as many boys also have tramped the [illegible] off their [illegible] have found [illegible]. And when they have nothing in the way of equipment to fall back on the trouble begins.

The girl is in the same boat as her young husband. She has married too [illegible]. Perhaps she hasn't finished her grade school [illegible] a year or two at high school at most.

As for anything in the way of training for a job, it has never entered her pretty head. She can't add up a column of figures correctly or write an intelligent letter. So these babes in the wood get married and in a year or two [illegible] are thoroughly disillusioned with life and each other.

IGNORANCE AND POVERTY

Ignorance and poverty are the great enemies of marriage. There is really nothing at all wrong with marriage as an institution. The fault lies with the people who go into it without due consideration [illegible] marriage [illegible]. Not every girl who is a joy to take out of evenings has the stamina to stand by those words in her marriage vows "In sickness and health, for richer or poorer." That takes real grit.

In these days though we have muddled and blundered, vocational training is open to everyone who has the ambition and industry to take advantage of it.

First Teeth Neglect Is Dangerous

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

Dr. Copeland

IT IS CLAIMED by the American [illegible] Association and endorsed by the medical profession that cleanliness of the teeth plus a wholesome diet, will prevent many of the diseases of childhood, as well as the ailments of later life. Arthritis, rheumatism, heart disease, kidney and lung disease, it is believed, may be traced to neglected teeth.

[illegible] diseases of adult life [illegible] prevented by proper [illegible] care of the teeth [illegible]. Unfortunately [illegible] believe that the [illegible] require little attention. "Believe-It-Or Nots" of Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SOME WEEKS ago this column printed a set of "Believe-it-or-nots" about marriage and divorce. Evidently it made popular reading, for various correspondents in different parts of the country have sent in more Believe-it-or-nots."

Wife No. 2 Enriched

A rich bequest from a first wife to a second has become operative through the marriage in London of Lieut. Col. Charles Edgerton, aged 47, to Anne Marie Joy. The colonel's first wife bequeathed money in trust to pay the income for life to her husband and in trust for his second wife if he should remarry, with remainder to any children of the second marriage.

Stalin's Wife Fined

Recently the wife of Stalin, the mystery man who rules Russia, was fined for keeping a book from the public library longer than the allotted time. Stalin insisted that she observe the regulations as well as other citizens. But as the woman had just had a baby, how could she worry about returning books on the minute?

Spanked by Husband

Mrs. H. Kelly of Los Angeles won a divorce on her story that her husband had spanked her. She testified that they had had a difference of opinion about the way bridge should be played and he turned her over [illegible] and spanked her.

A questionnaire sent to [illegible] college girl seniors by the state department of education, Richmond, Va., revealed that [illegible] expressed preference for stenography, nursing and teaching while only 18 expressed a desire for motherhood and homemaking.

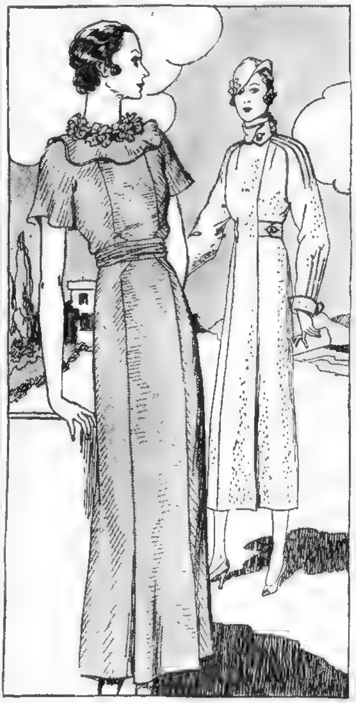
A Vera Borea Creation

SKETCHED IN PARIS



This Fauvety dress is of pale pink pique, collar, crushed belt, flowered necklace and all. The coat shown is a Vera Borea raincoat of a new white rainproof material which gives no rubbery appearance.

By PARIS BUREAU.

PARIS, Aug. 31. Paris has specific recommendations this year to the young woman who is planning her Autumn wardrobe. For the first time in many years cotton dresses are included in the wardrobes for the winter months. Pique, embroidered and printed linens and other washable fabrics are being used by Paris dressmakers for year 'round [illegible] times.

Lighter tones [illegible] on this year's list of colors [illegible] pinks, blues, yellows [illegible] and vivid orange are among the colors prophesied for dresses to wear under Autumn coats. Coats themselves are often of light colors, especially those in [illegible] season coats that are designed to serve for days that may be rainy and cool but not cold enough for heavy wraps.

Dinner for Soldier of Fortune

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

CLOSING "A Soldier of Fortune's Cook Book," I'm thanking my lucky stars that few of us are called upon to live on bear oil, raw whale blubber, lizards that are said to be more tender and savory than chicken, roasted ants in the Latin American backwoods, alligator eggs and tasty alligator salad or ragout, Australian snakes, boiled, fried or smoked, roast jaguars in South America with jaguars paws instead of pigs knuckles, monkeys, camels meat (considered a luxury in Arabia), swallows nest in China, tapir meat, caribou hide, turtles, locusts, or roasted sharks. No wonder a soldier of fortune needs a stout heart and an iron stomach.

Wish we could invite him in to a good old New England boiled dinner!

Jiggs' Favorite

Here's our pet method of cooking Jiggs' favorite.

Select fancy brisket and allow at least four pounds for six people. Wipe the meat and tie it securely in shape. Place in a large kettle and bring slowly to a boil. Boil five minutes, skim, reduce the heat and simmer, covered, until almost tender (three hours or more).

About an hour before it is done, skim off the fat and add six medium carrots, peeled and halved, one quartered yellow turnip, one small quartered cabbage and six medium potatoes. The onions and beets should be cooked separately in some of the corned beef stock, skimmed of fat.

If the corned beef is to be eaten cold, it should be cooled in the water in which it was cooked, then placed on a platter covered and weighted with a flat iron to press thoroughly.

For That Hash

The proportions we like best for corned beef hash are two cups of the chopped corned beef, two cups chopped cooked potatoes, two tablespoons fat, one tablespoon minced onions, one-eighth teaspoon pepper and salt to taste.

Mix the ingredients lightly, brown in the fat slowly and fold like an omelet onto a hot platter.

P. S. The fall classes of the Martha Lee Cooking School will open September 20. There will be a class for brides and business girls Tuesday evenings from 6:30 to 8:30 and a Homemakers' Class Wednesday afternoons from 2 to 4. Better write Martha Lee today for your ticket of admission for the 10 weeks' course and avoid disappointment. No charge, but we do ask you not to enroll unless you feel sure of attending at least seven lessons, which will entitle you to a diploma.

Daily True Story

"Adopted" Love

ARTHUR BOLTON peered intently into the vast, milling throng in Pennsylvania station. He was looking for a slim, straight-shouldered girl, with blonde hair curling edgewise over her trim, little hat.

She had been gone two weeks and her image had occupied his mind completely during her absence. As a matter of veracity, Arthur's mind had been preoccupied with the self same image for nearly a year.

His imagination had even been more fertile. Arthur had pictured Elisabeth in circumstances he had never seen her. He had visualized her opening a door of a little brick house in the suburbs for him with a cheerful greeting that dinner was ready.

Of course Arthur was in love. But love is a cause of blindness and mother of necessity—it is not always the parent of courage. And Arthur's temperament was such that he required an outside stimulus to stir him into action most vital to his happiness and peace of mind.

The simple question of proposing had proved a bugbear to him. Although affection gleamed in her eyes and although Elisabeth had demonstrated her interest in him, Arthur had never reached the stage where he could assure himself that she returned his devotion.

ELISABETH PUZZLED

He was engrossed in these meditations waiting for her to show up, when suddenly a middle aged woman, with a babe in her arms approached him.

"Pardon me," she said in strong Mid-Western farm accent, "but could you do me an important favor. Could you hold this baby for me for a few minutes while I telephone?"

And before Arthur had time to bring back his wool-gathering thoughts he had nodded assent, taken the baby clumsily in his arms, and the woman had disappeared.

Several minutes later Elisabeth showed up. She stopped short a few paces from him and her charming smile froze on her face. For a moment she looked nonplussed, then burst into a semi-convulsive laugh.

"You look so—ludicrous," she tittered. Arthur flushed to deepest turnip shade.

"Well, Arthur," continued Elisabeth, after her mirth had subsided, "what's the gag? I thought it was a joke at first. But now it looks serious. Whose is it?"

"I—er—d-d-don't kn-n-now." An embarrassing pause followed, then Arthur hastened the explanation.

THE MOMENTOUS QUESTION

"Well, for a moment I almost suspected . . ." laughed Elisabeth. "I suppose we'll have to wait."

So they stood and waited and talked, with Elisabeth doing most of the talking.

At length she completed her recital and they looked at the clock. Half an hour had passed and the woman had failed to return.

They began to consider how to dispose of the tot. Arthur made an effort to remember names of institutions that would accept foundlings.

"I hate foundling homes," remarked Elisabeth. "I can't bear to think of such an innocent mite being taken there. It ought to be adopted."

"That's a good idea," chimed in Arthur. "Let's adopt it."

Arthur sensed a momentous opportunity. With his free hand he drew her by the waistline closer to him.

"I guess this would be as good a time as any for me to say what I have been longing for a long time. Let's get married—and adopt this baby."

Elisabeth took his hand gently and smiled. Although she had been expecting it—it was rather sudden. She looked at the child staring wistfully into space. Then she nodded an assent . . .

THE PROGRAM STANDS

They had hardly begun to breathe normally again when the middle-aged woman appeared from around a corner and walked directly to Arthur.

"Thank you very much," she declared, taking the baby from him. "You have been very kind. I had a terrible time trying to get my cousin on the telephone—the gadgets are so confusing."

She looked up and noticed Elisabeth, standing so close to Arthur.

"Pardon me," she continued, "I didn't know you had matrons here, too."

Arthur and Elisabeth stared at her amazed.

"What do you mean, matrons?" asked Arthur. "And who do you think I am?"

"Why, aren't you an official of the company? You were standing here, looking over everybody," the woman replied.

Arthur and Elisabeth smiled. There was no need for further explanations.

On the way to her home in the taxi Arthur remarked:

"Well, we can't go through with the baby adoption—but how about the rest of our—er—program?"

Elisabeth came to the rescue:

"But, Arthur, you haven't even told me that you loved me."

Then she nestled closer to him.

Now Is Time to Bleach Your Neck White

NOW IS the time of year when necks and faces don't match in color. The back of the neck is especially in need of a whitening agent after a summer of flirtations with Mister Al Fresco, lolling on sunny beaches, exposure of neck cuticle on the golf links. Cut thin slices of lemon, place them in a row on a wash cloth, bind the wash cloth about the neck, let it remain on over night. Next morning bathe with clear cold water, dry, pat in cold cream.

See Your Doctor

WOMEN who are fanatics about bathing may still suffer from unpleasant odors caused by excessive perspiration. Their way towards relief leads to the medical examination; it has been determined that disorders of the thyroid gland are productive of excessive activity of sweat-glands. Temporary relief may be had by bathing the armpits with a strong solution of baking soda (one teaspoonful to a cupful of water), drying, frictioning in powdered boric acid. Proprietary remedies often bring about an improvement.

The Marry-Go-Round

The Forgotten Woman

By HELEN ROWLAND

"WHAT'S THE USE of being a nice decorous sensible girl?" [illegible] the Office Philosopher, with an appraising glance at her vanity mirror.

Helen Rowland

"It may get you a reward in Paradise but it certainly gets you no publicity and very little attention here on earth. You may make your mother or your husband or your family perfectly happy by doing the wise and proper thing—you've got to do something foolish or wild or desperate to make the world sit up and take notice.

• • •

"Of course, once in a while some 'nice girl' like Amelia Earhart or Helen Wills DOES get her picture in the newspapers. But the world is full of sensible, dignified, nice-looking girls who will never get a line of public praise except in their obituaries or on their tombstones.

• • •

"Any woman who has made two or three or four husbands miserable and helped keep up the traffic to Reno or has thrown a paper-weight at her gigolo or helped herself to some other woman's husband get a big spread and lots of stage and screen offers. But did you ever hear of a woman being given a 'scare-head' because she was devoted and true to her husband and could make good blueberry pie?

WHAT'S THE USE OF BEING A NICE GIRL?

• • •

"That's not NEWS, but it ought to be in these days when devoted wives and good cooks are so scarce and divorcees are so plentiful.

• • •

"It ought to be 'news' when a girl goes home from the office and helps her mother with the dishes, instead of rushing out to a dance or a movie and spending all her money on mesh stockings and taxicabs.

• • •

"It ought to be news when a girl refuses to be kissed or mauled in a taxicab and never goes out with anybody except her steady sweetheart, whom she intends to marry, and never plays in any other woman's back yard.

• • •

"It ought to be 'news' when a woman marries a wild bachelor and makes him over into a useful citizen, and brings up his sons to be gentlemen. And when a man goes to the office every morning, comes home on time for dinner every night, keeps his bills paid up, loves his own wife and never looks at any other woman.

• • •

"But it's only when a society woman elopes with her chauffeur or a showgirl marries a millionaire or some rich playboy throws his cutie out of a window or gives his wife a black eye that the public begins to take an interest in them.

• • •

"The Forgotten Man and the Forgotten Woman are the ones who do their work conscientiously, keep to the straight and narrow path, never cut in on other people's love affairs or marriages, never drive motor cars while intoxicated and never shoot each other up.

• • •

"They aren't 'COLORFUL,' I suppose, or 'glamorous' enough. Still, they are getting to be almost as rare as the man who 'bites a dog.' So they OUGHT to be news."

Seeing is believing on washday — by C.A. Voight
HELLO THERE, KATHERINE! YOU'RE THROUGH WITH YOUR WASH EARLY
OH GOOD MORNING RUTH! COME ON IN FOR A FEW MINUTES
I CAN'T STAY LONG — I JUST RAN OUT TO BUY SOME SOAP
WELL, BE SURE YOU GET RINSO —IT'S THE SOAP THAT SAVES ME HOURS OF SCRUBBING EVERY WASHDAY
SO THAT'S WHY YOU'RE ALWAYS THROUGH SO MANY HOURS AHEAD OF ME! AND IS IT RINSO THAT GETS YOUR CLOTHES SO SNOWY?
YES—I DON'T EVEN BOIL MY LINENS ANYMORE, RINSO GETS THEM SO WHITE
NEXT WASHDAY
WHAT RICH LIVELY SUDS—FROM JUST A LITTLE RINSO! I MUST TRY IT FOR THE DISHES, TOO. IT'S SO EASY ON THE HANDS
THROUGH HOURS EARLIER—AND A WHITER WASH THAN EVER—I WISH I HAD CHANGED TO RINSO LONG AGO!
Rinso

One box did this big wash for Mrs. H. S. Leighton of Old Orchard, Me.

"I CAN'T get over the wonder of the amount of work I get out of one big box of Rinso. I do a washing every day, but for a week I was unable to do any at all and had such bad weather we had quite an accumulation to do at one time. Here's a list of the wash I did that week:

1 bedspread
4 bureau scarfs
6 face cloths
12 napkins
14 pillow cases
15 sheets
30 towels
6 dish towels
12 handkerchiefs
2 pairs children's stockings
4 pieces underwear
8 nightclothes
2 housedresses
1 nightgown
4 aprons
2 pairs socks
2 shirts

"I also scrubbed the floors twice, cleaned the sink and tubs 7 times, and did my dishes for a whole week."

Rinso soaks out dirt—saves scrubbing and boiling. That saves the clothes—saves your hands. Get the BIG box. See how much work it will do for you.

Millions use Rinso—it's so easy on the hands

MARKETS

BUSINESS

DO THE BIG EXECUTIVES SPECULATE?

By B. C. FORBES

Large-scale business and large-scale speculation don't usually mix satisfactorily.

Whelan Mixed and Lost

George J. Whelan, tobacco magnate, tried it. First he lost out, and now his creation, United Cigar Stores, which he lost, has descended into bankruptcy.

Whelan was a born speculator. After he built up United Cigar Stores into a highly successful enterprise, with hundreds of well-run stores, he began creating other projects, usually connected with tobacco, but outside stockholders were chagrined at the rapidity with which he reshuffled his various ventures. Stock in one company would be offered in exchange for stock in another company. Whelan himself doubtless knew the strength or weakness of each and all of the various business balls he kept juggling in the air, but ordinary stockholders were not in an equal position to form sound judgments.

Methods Criticized

This writer outspokenly criticized Whelan's stock market activities, but he kept spreading out, apparently becoming more and more of a mercantile power.

Also, he became known as an extremely active stock speculator. He was associated with W. C. Durant and others in some pools, but Whelan's methods didn't always commend themselves to his co-manipulators.

Finally, financial and physical misfortune overtook Whelan, and he dropped completely out of the picture. Rumor has it that he has recovered sufficiently to aspire to becoming again a factor in United Cigar Stores now that it has gone into receivership.

Few men have proved able to succeed as grand-scale speculators and, simultaneously, as active, directing heads of a huge business. The one activity seems to unfit for the other.

The popular impression is that the majority of prominent corporation executives operate extensively in the stock market, especially in shares of their own company. This is far from being wholly true.

Rockefeller Against Speculation

Railway executives rarely are speculators. In the public utility field there are a number of notorious market operators, particularly in shares of companies they are identified with. Steel executives stick closely to their business—with one outstanding exception. Many motor executives are factors in the market, but nearly always in their own shares. As they are notorious optimists, some of them have fared tragically during the last three years.

Among oil leaders are quite a number of devotees of the stock market. Standard Oil executives mostly are exceptions. John D. Rockefeller once told me that few things annoyed him more than persistent published reports that "Standard Oil" was gambling in Wall St., accompanied by intimation that Rockefeller himself was up to his neck in speculation. He vowed that he had never indulged in such practices, but confided that his investments revealed that the arch offender was one of his associates, H. H. Rogers, of ill-starred Amalgamated Copper fame.

Copper leaders, incidentally, have often been addicts of daring speculation.

Not many eminent industrialists are notoriously active in current stock market doings. Most of them need all their vitality to battle against economic conditions.

PLAN TO SPREAD WORK VIEWED

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

New York, Aug. 31—President Hoover, in his address before the national conference of business and industrial committees at Washington, alluded to the drive being made on the Pacific coast to spread work.

A spokesman for the business and industrial committee in the twelfth district told me:

"The only new thing about our campaign to spread work is the manner in which we approached the matter. We have organized along the lines of a Liberty loan drive. In San Francisco, for example, there is a general committee, with its chairman and a vice-chairman in charge of each industrial division of the community, with their colonels and captains of teams selected in a manner so that when any employer is approached it is by some one in his own line of business. In other words, there is a personal contact in every instance by one who speaks the employer's language and can tell him exactly how the spread-of-work principle can be applied in his business.

"We are asking employers to adopt this spreading of the work as an emergency measure, and are not advocating any special or definite plan of how it should be done. We are using the slogan 'Job Security by Job Sharing.'

"We are advocating that those firms who are still working on full time and during the past have let men go that they didn't need, that they take them back and spread the work in the plant and in that way not only give work to those who are now unployed, but eliminate the fear on the part of those who are employed that they will be the next to go."

Closing Is Easy in London Market

London, Aug. 31—Prices on the stock exchange here were easy at today's close. The closing in Paris was mixed. In Berlin trading was somewhat hesitant, due to parliamentary uncertainties, but private buying later caused a spurt in prices, the closing being firm.

PRICES RAISED BY BIG MILLS

Numerous big mills are announcing price advances for their products.

Pacific Mills has advanced the price of percales ½-cent a yard all around. This is the third advance, amounting to 2 cents a yard in the aggregate, within the past month.

American Woolen Company has put up prices on all worsted suitings, sold through departments 1 and 2, from 5 to 10 cents per yard. Advances of 5 to 12½ cents have been made by the company on a number of women's wear fabrics. Cloths affected by the advance were withdrawn from the market last Friday, but are now being reoffered at the higher levels.

Other companies have either made or are planning price advances ranging as high as 15 cents a yard.

Price advances on cotton and rayon furniture upholstery fabrics will be made by number of large mills after Labor Day. Advances under consideration average 10 per cent to 15 per cent on tapestry fabrics.

Cone Export & Commission Company marked up prices ½ cent a yard on Revolution solid color, printed and plain canton flannels.

COPPERS SHARE IN RECOVERY OF VALUES

By FRANK H. MELOON

Coppers this week have shared notably in the recovery of values in Wall and State Streets, registering numerous new highs for the current year or longer. Another marking up for domestic metal is the latest tangible development to back the improvement achieved. No doubt more price advances will follow, if buying [illegible] frequently stimulated, at least temporarily, by rising prices. It should be remembered that copper is still [illegible] a half a cent [illegible] low.

* * *

When the newspapers and other [illegible] farm [illegible] they are not talking about New England farms. As a result of a study of federal loans in New England which were almost at an irreducible minimum, we stated in this column more than a year ago that the farmer in these north[illegible] [illegible] needing special assistance from government sources. In this connection it is interesting to note that Dr. Arthur W. Gilbert, state commissioner of agriculture for Massachusetts, has just reported to a Hoover conference that New England farmers are in no need of special assistance from the government.

Dr. A. W. Gilbert

* * *

Dr. Gilbert makes the farm loans situation here very clear indeed when he states:

"The credit situation among the New England farmers is not essentially different from what it has been for many years past. The responsible farmer can get credit at his local bank. There is no question that bankers in large towns and in cities are just as willing to extend credit to farmers as ever provided the farmers really deserve such credit and would profit by it. No good purpose will be served by loaning money to farmers who are poor risks. The local banker knows better than any outsider possibly can which farmers are entitled to credit and which are not."

* * *

Many think it remarkable how easily prices are being influenced upward in lines where enormous surpluses are known to exist.

* * *

Considerable vagueness surrounds Reconstruction Finance Loan powers. Clarification steps are taken [illegible] the law permits [illegible] marketing [illegible] commodities.

Big Canada Loan Rumor Is Doubted

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 31 (AP)—Re[illegible] that the Dominion government would float a loan for $200,000,000 this fall are given no credence in official circles.

As residium, amounting to $34,000,000 of one of the war loans falls due on December 1 next. This maturity may be handled by conversion. In the event of this course being followed, a loan for about $50,000,000 may be floated. The loan would be domestic, payable in Canadian funds. Following the lines of the 1931 conversion loan in November last, it is probable that the interest fixed would be about 4½ per cent.

STATE ST. Hears:

That while a good-sized technical correction is undoubtedly in the making, it may not come until prices have made one or two false starts on the downward path. It is not impossible that sharp, sudden dips will be followed by quick markups. After all, such action would be part and parcel of a smart distributing operation, which can be expected to match the clever tactics that achieved recent high prices.

Trading Notes

Proceeding on the assumption that those now long stocks look on the market in two distinct ways, one brokerage observer offers advice suitable for both. The swing player who took a position a month or so back, and stayed with it, is advised to take profits on all bulges.

The short term trader, who has made it a point to buy on all setbacks and get out on the sharp thrusts upward, can continue to operate with the proviso that he recognize the increasing selectiveness by sticking to specialties. He also must be prepared for a [illegible] which will be the real te[illegible].

As for the die hard bears, who refused to become even temporary bulls in order to seize profit opportunities on the upside, they must be wary. If they throw out stock on dullness they run the risk of being fodder for squeezes. They might better wait and see what the turn of the month brings.

Odds and Ends

Traders who play the intermediate swings, which usually last from three to seven weeks, should remember that the upswing from July 8 has already lasted 44 trading days. Further than that, reliable danger signals are now visible in the bond department and railroad stock section, which led the way.

While the heavy selling of cotton was due in part to profit taking after a nearly straight up rise, some operators were getting out on the English mill situation. They feel Lancashire operators are [illegible] hear demand [illegible] and may be up production for some little while.

Measured by the 100 stock average compiled by Moody's, the market has retraced the ground lost since just prior to England's going off the gold standard. Incidentally it is with great interest that the writer notes the retracement brings the average back to the approximate time of Montague Norman's last visit.

COPPER IS AGAIN MARKED UP

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Copper prices which this week have became firmer in response to better European buying gained another ⅛ cent today.

The domestic price was quoted at 5⅝ cents a pound delivered up to the end of 1932. This compared with 5⅛ cents yesterday. The European price was 5⅞ cents today in Hamburg, Havre and London.

Domestic buying was reported quiet, but fair buying came into the market abroad.

Radio Demand Up, Grigsby Adds Men

Chicago, Aug. 31—Better than seasonal pickup in radio demand is reported by Grigsby-Grunow Co. and Zenith Radio Corp. Grigsby reported an increase in personnel to 2000 from 1000 the past few weeks.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

DURING RALLYING periods today attention centered largely in the rails. For the first seven months of this year net earnings of Class 1 railroads recorded a decline of 57.8 per cent from the similar period of 1931. Freight car loadings are expected to register improvement for August, however, and there is hope that earnings may continue upward for the rest of the year.

New Leadership Sobering Market

Character of stocks brought forward as latest leader of the market led many commission houses to issue cautionary advices to their clients against following the advance at this stage. Most of these opinions stressed the failure of rails and pivotal industrials to come to the fore with greater frequency and enthusiasm the past few days. Fact that the rails as a group have lost the greatest average amount of ground this week seems to be producing a decidedly sobering effect on sentiment.

New Group Reported in Reynolds Tobacco

A new group with substantial capital is reported to have become interested in Reynolds Tobacco "B" stock.

Big Spreads Asked on Puts and Calls

Wide spreads quoted on puts and calls from prevailing market prices would seem to suggest a highly confused view exists with respect to the immediate course of prices. Several privilege brokers are quoting both "risks" on some active issues as much as 15 points either side. In the case of Auburn the spread is 30 points on puts to 35 points on calls. American Telephone is quoted 10 points down to 20 points up; Case 15 down to 20 up; American Can and Steel 5 down to 12 up and Westinghouse 6 down to 8 points up.

Utility Value Fixing Practice

Market commentator for a large Wall Street brokerage firm, expressed the belief that the strength of utility stocks calls attention to two basic considerations likely to affect the conception of utility values for months to come. The first in his opinion is the generally appreciated fact that in this depression utility earnings both actually and percentage-wide have suffered far less than rail and industrial earnings. At the worst the decline in utility gross has not run above 14 per cent.

Dividend and Gross Losses Compared

In some cases declines in gross of 9 per cent have been accompanied by losses in dividend net of only 4 or 5 per cent. Where overriding senior capital is 70 to 90 per cent of capital structure the loss in gross has meant a net shrinkage where half or two-thirds of 1931 common share profits have been eliminated. This very leverage of small common stock capital in ratio to total capital builds up common share earnings with remarkable rapidity once the tide turns.

National Power Topic of Rumors

National Power & Light was the center of a variety of rumors that were singularly reminiscent of the merger-making utility era of 1928-29. Strangely enough, too, those spreading the stories phrased their language [illegible] after the [illegible] style used on the previous occasion, i. e., "National Power & Light is contemplating a deal with another utility holding concern."

MILLS ADDING TO WORKERS

Numerous New England mills were announced today as reopening or adding to workers.

At North Adams the Greylock Mill B of the Berkshire Fine Spinning Associates, Inc., reopened with night and day shifts employing 250 persons. The mill has been closed five months. Mill A is operating night and day with 375 hands.

The King Philip Mills in Warren, R. I., also unit of the Berkshire group, will resume operations next Tuesday after having been closed three years. They will employ [illegible] persons.

Berkshire company's mills in Brattleboro, Vt., and Fall River are advanced to [illegible].

Standard-Coosa-Thatcher Co., one of largest producers of cotton yarns, will have a normal force of 2800 persons back to work within a month.

SPECTATOR Says:

The market is obviously tired. Further reaction is indicated with the possibility of a new try for a rally. We would watch the market closely to see how it acts under further selling pressure before thinking of reentering.

Grooming Rails

The important thing is that informed interests are still outwardly committed to higher prices. As long as the trend remains up, intermediate reactions can be ignored.

Action of the rails suggests that they are being groomed for leadership of the next rise.

There are several things in the rail background that will provide ammunition . . . Concerted action on wages is one.

Merger Session

As for the four-party merger session today, there are numerous possibilities. Even a complete agreement could have no immediate tangible result, but bullish forces would apt to set this thought aside. Especially as the entire summer recovery to date has been built on a foundation of expectations rather than of certainties.

In addition, the car loadings trend is not unpromising and another gain this Saturday would not be surprising.

It is to be hoped this will prove better than last Saturday's, which showed a gain of only 6211 cars against more than 16,000 the previous week. It must also be confessed that any railroad earnings reports shown to date do not offer the best grade of bullish ammunition, measured from any standard of comparison.

Here and There

It next remains to [illegible] will stimulate the movement of grain and thus make for increased loadings. Lackawanna is the [illegible] favorite of one smart group. We have a hunch about Norfolk & Western, and wonder what would happen to it if the Pensylvania crowd decided to work a markup there such as occurred in Lackawanna last week . . .

It would "sweeten" Pennsylvania's portfolio beautifully . . . The smart people are going into bond again, especially the second-grade rails.

STOCKS LOWER ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

Stocks were worsed [illegible] in trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today after a second period rally had sent leading shares up around a point. Losses ranged from fractions to around 5 points late in the session. Edison Electric slumped 5 points.

Rail shares which led the forenoon rally, [illegible] and Atchison [illegible] over 2 [illegible] New Haven [illegible] closing price.

American Telephone was down a point and New England Telephone showed a 2-point loss. Recessions of a point or more appeared for such issues as Bigelow Sanford, Mohawk, Pacific Mills and Swift Internacional.

Eastern Gas & Fuel was strong and [illegible] of a point. Losses [illegible] proportions were shown for Anaconda, Quincy Mining, Sullivan Machine, United Gas Co. and United Shoe.

POWER OUTPUT UP SLIGHTLY

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—A slight gain in electric power production for the week ended Aug. 27—the first time a gain has been recorded in that week since 1929—was reported today by the National Electric Light Association.

Total kilowatt-hours produced during the week were 1,436,440,000, against 1,421,910,000 in the preceding week [illegible] from the [illegible] week of [illegible] 12.3 per cent [illegible] in the previous week. [illegible] the previous [illegible] than [illegible] week of both [illegible] and 1931 [illegible] slight decline.

The [illegible] for the week was the [illegible] July [illegible] with last year [illegible] the week [illegible] which was off 11.9 per cent.

[illegible] the Atlantic seaboard showed [illegible] of 8.2 per cent [illegible] New England [illegible] 8.6 per cent. Pacific coast was off [illegible] industrial [illegible] 1.2 per cent.

CLOSING MIXED IN WALL ST.; RAILS RISE

New York, Aug. 31—Prices closed mixed on the New York Stock Exchange today after selling waves had swept numerous issues down one to over four points. The rails were leaders in the last hour recovery, which lowered or cancelled a considerable number of setbacks elsewhere.

In the late rally Lackawanna was up over 6 points. At the same time Union Pacific lifted 3 from its day's low. New York Central and Southern Pacific showed strength. There were late rallies from the day's bottom prices in cotton and grain, which had had stiff reactions.

Rather disappointing reports from the steel industry and the approach of the Labor Day week-end accelerated the selling movement, which embraced cotton and wheat, as well as stocks.

A brief upturn in the morning failed to attract an important following and by midday the list had receded to show many losses of 1 to 4 points.

The governors decided to keep the stock market open Saturday.

Brighter aspects of the day's news included the weekly report of electric power production, showing the first gain for the fourth week of August since 1929. Compared to last year, the recession was 12.3 per cent, against 12.9 in the previous week.

Business was on the decline at this time in 1929, however, and the gain reported today was so small that there was a tendency to withhold judgment. Copper continued its gradual climb, quoted at 5¼ cents, up ¼ of a cent.

There was an obvious feeling in speculative quarters that it might be well to let the market drift momentarily, giving business a chance to catch up. Standard statistics in its monthly survey said:

"Only in the textile and shoe lines have definite gains been realized . . . It would require the extension of this occurrence, together with furtherance of the recent upturn in freight car loadings and electric power production, definitely to record a basic departure from the extreme bottom level."

But there seemed to be no deterioration in Wall Street in the restored confidence in the future, merely a feeling that recovery should not be discounted by the market too far in advance.

While steel production sagged under its 14 per cent of capacity level, it was pointed out that a temporary sag in late August might not be important, but what was important was whether it would be able to get up to 30 per cent or better during the next two months.

Bank to Liquidate Security Affiliate

New York, Aug. 31—Preliminary steps to liquidation of the Commercial National Corporation, security affiliate of the Commercial National Bank and Trust Company, were taken yesterday with the call for a special stockholders meeting Sept. 7.

Proposal to change the certificate of incorporation and par value of the stock will be acted on at that time. It is planned to issue 70,000 new shares, $1 par, for a similar amount of no par stock now outstanding. This will reduce capital of the security unit from $1,400,000 to $70,000.

Railroad Earnings Betterment Likely

New York, Aug. 31 (AP)—Based on individual car loadings reports for the first two weeks in August WWsWll St. expects that August railroad statements will show material gains in gross over July and a consequently better comparison with 1931. With expenses cut to the bone, a substantial part of the larger gross should be carried directly to net operating income, it is estimated.

$2,000,000 Plan of Sinclair Expansion

A $2,500,000 improvement program has been approved by Sinclair Refining Co., subsidiary of Consolidated Oil Corp. It is to be carried out at the company's Argentine and Coffeyville, Kansas, refineries, but extended also to refineries at East Chicago, Houston and Marcus Hook, N. J., with modern pressure-still units at each of the Kansas plants.

Grains Close Down in Chicago Market

Chicago, Aug. 31—After a sharp sell-off in the grain pits today, last minute rallies erased some of the losses, but wheat closed weak and ⅝ to 1⅞ cents lower than yesterday's finish. Corn was ⅝ to 1⅜ off, oats steady to ⅜ down, and provisions showed drop of 5 to 15 cents.

Cotton Higher in New York Market

New York, Aug. 31—Cotton futures resumed their interrupted upward trend today. A moderate rally took place at the opening, following the setback amounting to $2.50 a bale on Tuesday, or of between $4 and $5 a bale from the highs of Monday afternoon. Late prices were up 13 to 18 points.

Youngstown Sheet Marking Up Lines

Youngstown, O., Aug. 31—Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. announces price advances in standard steel pipe, line pipe, water-well casing and large O. D. pipe, effective Sept. 1. There is no change in price of oil country goods.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

FOUR TOTS SUBMIT TO GAS ATTACK IN NOBLE EXPERIMENT

Because the forthcoming Presidential campaign will be carried on largely over the radio, it is practically impossible for candidates to do much baby kissing. This slight to the children of the land is regretted by all candidates, who are deeply interested in child welfare. The delicate situation has resulted in long and anxious hours of study, but a solution is, happily, at hand. The four "chickabiddles" (as the candidates call them), above, have been selected to represent all the children in America. These four "kidlets" will be chained to microphones, and submit to kisses from candidates as often as possible. They are loaned by courtesy of a well known third-class postmaster.

Q. AND A. DEPARTMENT

Dear Aunt Bella:

Don't you think with women returning to the 1880 styles that men should grow whiskers?

—ANXIOUS.

Ans.—Well, whiskers are real nice on some guys, but me, I'm ticklish, dearie.

RADIO FRONT ALL QUIET

Song Situation Peacefully Settled

By N. F. T.

Recent hoopla about a threatened song strike has blown over. If not beautifully, at least quietly. Sure enough, the organization with the long name (American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers) has agreed to an armistice with radio rahjahs. Or it may be the other way around.

• • •

WHAT PRICE PEACE?

Naturally, said peace pact involves money. While the stipulated sum isn't as much as the aforementioned association wanted, it can also be reported as somewhat more than the latter named broadcasters wanted. Meaning more than they wanted to pay.

• • •

Thus and so our air waves will not be deprived of popular tin pan alley tunes henceforth. On with the dance.

• • •

SAD STORY

Today's date reminds us, one of the countless "colyum" faithfuls asks by letter if Weber and Fields are likely to be radio returning soon. So far as can be learned right now, nothing would indicate any immediate "mike" prospects for the famous pair. Here's where the date comes in. These two dearly loved to tell a yarn concerning an old German saloon keeper who had his place very much tied up financially. He was facing foreclosure on this day a good many years ago. One of his steady (although slightly unsteady at the time) patrons, undertook to console him over a good sized seidel of suds. All the veteran bar room boss could think of however, was: "Vell, tomorrow comes it der fearst uff September. Yah! Und den my friendt, dot vill be der last uff August." Perhaps I forgot to mention in the beginning, the name of our innkeeper was August. Get it? In any event, there remain many listeners who would like hearing from Weber and Fields regularly. Count me among them.

• • •

What appears to be an entirely new program angle has been struck with the coming of a new feature, called "America in Revue" planned by NBC headquarters. A debut date has been set for Sept. 7th. Figure on WEEI likely to air it hereabouts. More about it another time.

• • •

LOCAL LATHER

When artists on the air bring up having performed for Xmas charity and suggest obligation on the part of those who stage benefit performances for the poor at Yuletide, such colossal "courage" beats by far anything your Uncle N. F. T. ever had come to his attention. What's more, naming tin horns like that right here and stating the circumstances, would serve the smart ones in mind well right. Even so, two wrongs never make matters even. Then again learning about people is one of the things helping to make life worth while. Incidentally a lesson certain conceited young chappies cavorting in this grand old conservative city might start studying—and soon. No wonder commercial sponsors are scarce in some cases . . . Loudspeaker patrons (WNAC) will hear all sorts of sounds tonight, as made by a fellow named John Smith, when interviewed by Irwin Cowper over Yankee Network facilities between 45 and 6 o'clock. Dialects, animals, elements, machinery, all are as like rolling off a log for Mr. Smith. Lend him an ear or two . . . Wearing smoked glasses to watch the Eclipse is in order, but listeners shouldn't don earmuffs sitting beside receivers . . . Del (WEEI) Castillo uses his half hour at the console tonight (10:30 to 11) for a group of music gems that have the word "music" as their theme. Ruth Chilton does the vocal soloing . . . Martha (WAAB) Lee painting word pictures these days, telling hearers how busy brush men (not those door to door kind) are painting her enlarged downtown kitchen in bright new colors . . . Singin' Sam will probably be the next air favorite booked for theatre duty here in person—watch! He's one of very few not yet signed by footlight forces for Boston.

FAMED CONCORD STORE 67 TODAY

A shoe dealer who sold shoes to Ralph Waldo Emerson, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Louisa M. Alcott and Frank B. Sanborn, "the Sage of Concord," today in Concord celebrated the 67th anniversary of his shoe store in Main st.

He is Frank Pierce, oldest active business man in Concord and the sole survivor, in that town, of the storekeepers of Civil War days.

Pierce was only 15 years old when he left school in 1865 to open the store with his father on Aug. 31, at what was known then as the Mill Dam but which now is Main st. Ten years later his father died, and he has been running the establishment alone ever since.

Winchester Police Join Radio Chain

Winchester police will shortly receive regular broadcasting service from the Arlington police department, it was announced today. Lexington and Woburn police are already linked up with the Arlington service through the installation of radio receiving sets in the scout cars of these departments.

Georgie Price's imitations are making some of the artists he imitates swell headed. They never knew they sounded so well.

Georgie, by the way, is going to take Harry Richman's place on the Sun. NBC coffee hr. He starts with Harry this Sun. and two wks. later Richman will be dropped . . . Tony Wons will return to CBS on his a. m schedule to start laboring on Labor Day . . . A Hub harmony team, at present unsponsored, says "We place a value on our work and we wait until the sponsor comes along who will appreciate our work and pay us our price" . . . Sponsors aren't like trolley cars, boys. They don't "come along" every few minutes. You've got to shanghai 'em to get 'em these days, so change your motto, boys.

NBC's Three Keys have landed a 17 wk. vodvil contract at a figure around $1000 a wk. The Three Keys have found a key to success, as it were . . . Jimmy Durante, Marie Dressler and Polly Moran will be heard during Hollywood on the Air, WBZ, Thurs. at 12 . . . WJAR's tenth anniversary Sept. 7 will be occasion for a gala N. E. Network p'gram . . . George Jessel will do several air p'grams when he arrives in Boston next wk. for an engagement at the Met . . . Mickie Alport is likely to leave Montreal in a few days for a wk. of vodvil in Detroit . . . Sweet voiced Emily MacKenzie startled a lot of folks when she revealed in a WAAB interview the other eve, that she's an ex-chorus girl . . . Cleercoalers' p'gram returns to WEEI and the N. E. Network Sept. 15 with Adrian O'Brien as featured soloist.

Stray Thought No. 46: If radio comedians were forbidden to mention celophane, their relatives and their inventions, the radio humor situation would be better off—there wouldn't be any.

"We're going off the air," say the Funnyboners, "because radio is bankrupt. At least we heard an executive say b'dcasters don't make radio, but that radio is in the hands of the receivers."

G. O. P. 'Unalterably on Both Sides of Dry Issue'

When the late Bob Ingersoll uttered his prayer to be delivered from his friends, adding that he could take care of his enemies himself, he must have been in a somewhat similar plight to that of President Hoover on the prohibition question.

Mr. Hoover, in his speech of acceptance, may remark the "spread of disrespect" which the prohibition law has caused, "not only for this law, but for all laws" and the "increase in subsidized crime and violence." In imputing these conditions to the difficulty of enforcing the law, under our dual form of government, he may declare that he "CANNOT CONSENT TO THE CONTINUATION OF THIS REGIME," but he cannot shake the loyalty and confidence of his dry supporters.

The Republican party is just recovering from the shock of Vice-President Curtis' affirmation of his undying belief in prohibition, which he gratuitously injected into his speech accepting renomination for his present office. But that does not deter Dr. H. L. Bowlby, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance in the United States, from stepping forward to relate to the Stony Brook Bible Assembly, at its conference this week in St. James, Long Island, that when he visited the White House two weeks ago, President Hoover in discussing prohibition said to him:

> "I shall continue to ENFORCE THE LAW WITH ALL MY MIGHT. Our fight is to keep the liquor traffic from coming back into control, and sometimes WE MUST RETREAT IN ORDER TO WIN."

It would seem that the Republican party, despite the cumbrous length of its obscure prohibition plank, and despite the space which its Presidential candidate devotes to the subject in his acceptance speech, has NOT YET SUCCEEDED in saying JUST WHERE IT STANDS on this vital issue.

It would perhaps save President Hoover and his campaign managers a good deal of labor and vexation of spirit, as they vainly reach for something that can be described as "a ringing utterance," and at the same time, NOT A COMMITMENT, on the subject of prohibition, if they were to declare once and for all that they are UNALTERABLY ON BOTH SIDES OF THE QUESTION.

60 Days' Respite

Homes Safe a Little Longer

Mr. Charles F. Hurley, Treasurer and Receiver-General for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, sends the following message:

> "The Boston Evening American should derive great satisfaction from the announcement of Franklin W. Fort, Chairman of the Federal Home Loan Board at Washington, of the suspension for sixty days of foreclosure of mortgages upon homes held by closed banks.
>
> "This is the identical policy which the Boston Evening American advocated fifteen months ago.
>
> "We are informed by the press of the Nation that Mr. Fort's 'new policy' was received with great applause and unstinted approval by the business leaders of the country assembled at Washington at the call of President Hoover—a year and three months after you had declared that such a policy was vitally necessary to protect the American homeowner in the continued ownership and occupancy of the home he had created by years of industry and thrift.
>
> "Please let me compliment you upon your ingenuity and upon the economic soundness of your idea, now justified by the 'best brains' of the country. If your policy had been adopted at the time of its declaration, much of the travail and hardship of the past fifteen months would have been eliminated, and the American people would have been the happier for it."

All right, Mr. Hurley. But the people of Massachusetts are not going to forget that it was you who stated this policy to audiences everywhere in New England, and with unflinching confidence in its correctness, when the "best brains" were trying to "laugh you to scorn" for it.

Hear the Woodpecker!

The Boston Finance Commission suggested that the specifications issued by the city of Boston for the purchase of fire-fighting equipment would result in bids being received from but one company—the company which has had a monopoly on the sale of fire apparatus the past sixteen years.

The Finance Commission may be like a prophet without honor in his own land.

Its prediction was ignored, but proved to be true. Only one bid was received for the two new pumps and the aerial ladder truck, and from the same company.

This was an item of only $42,750, but it is one of those items of woodpecker economy which has enabled the city of Newton to reduce its tax rate annually the past ten years, at consequent saving to its taxpayers.

Competitive bidding produces the cheapest prices possible. Any city can afford to take advantage of THAT.

Birdies at Golf

The Brooklyn jurist—himself a great swatter with the clubs—who ruled that golf was not a form of pleasure, was probably weary of hunting for spheres lost in the "rough." He would be glad to know that a chemist has discovered how insects can be utilized in finding them.

He saturates his golf balls in a perfume that directly brings a thick cloud of butterflies over the lost ball. After an unlucky drive, all he has to do is sit down and wait until the butterflies wing over and give him the high sign.

A further refinement would be the use of falcons. These interesting birds, whose education has been neglected since falconry went out of style three centuries ago, could be trained as retrievers. Lose a ball, and fetch it back with a birdie.

New York Day by Day

Like an Old Friend

NEW YORK, Aug. 31—I circled up to Ben Riley's hill-top crag the other evening for dinner. Once a year I manage to dine there, and always find it pleasantly the same. Old restaurants should be like old friends, but in the modern whirl they so seldom are.

The gnarled, python-limbed oak, strung in lights and growing out of the dance floor's center, is as grotesquely solemnified as ever. Its quietism seems so out of time with the jazz blasts reverberating about its venerable roots.

The piece de resistance is still frogs' legs with creamed potatoes and golden square cuts of corn bread. But there was a young sprig on the dance floor whose mustache somehow slowed my enthusiasm. One has a right to a mustache, I suppose, yet it shouldn't make everybody perfectly furious.

Another thing I noticed. There are certain young couples who like to "slow motion" around an orchestra leader and engage in meaningless conversation. I thought that went out about the time Paul Whiteman left the Palais Royal and I gave up dancing

I wonder, too, if Ben Riley hasn't about the only Irish head waiter left in New York. Certainly he's the only one I know wearing rimless eyeglasses. Old-timers of the Knickerbocker hotel will remember him—George Cassidy, the wine steward, Regan's man Friday.

* * *

Passing a mid-town bank, I saw a lady wearing brightly colored pajamas. If it was not the very engaging Ruth Etting, whose nasal laments one hears over the radio, she has a most astonishing double.

* * *

I'm out of sorts with talkie titles. It strikes me their chief aim is to startle. The screen version of "Madame Bovary" becomes "Unholy Love," and so on. The happiest title of the period, to me, is "Destry Rides Again." Although I did not see the picture. It has brevity, euphony and romantic benison. The play titles which always appealed to me were Eugene Walter's, such as "The Easiest Way" and "Bought and Paid For."

* * *

Walter and I were desk-mates on a mid-west newspaper. He was an indifferent reporter, marking time to save enough for the New York venture. Not one of us in that particular editorial room could imagine him as the occupier of a Madison Square bench one night and the white-haired boy of the Rialto the next. He came back later, the author of the reigning hit, husband of the distinguished star, Charlotte Walker, wearing fawn spats, gaudy vest, and carrying a silver-topped cane, and found his hotel suite fizzing with flashlights. So completely did he awe those of us who worked with him and called him "Gene," that to a man we addressed him as "Mr. Walter." And to his credit, he talked us out of that at one of those plainly honest and well ringed tables at Foucar's.

* * *

Gabbing with Roscoe Peacock recently, it came to me that all the Roscoes I ever knew had bird-like names—Roscoe Peacock, Roscoe Eagle, Roscoe Swan and—believe it or not—Roscoe Sparrow. Anyway, Peacock shares my fervent admiration for the Cellinis of word jewelry—such verbal silversmiths as Christopher Morley, Joseph Hergesheimer, Edna Millay, etc. Yet, he, like all of us, finds himself turning now and then for inspiration to the master word sculpturer—William Shakespeare. He was the honey of them all.

* * *

Omar, too, of course, twanged a mean lyre. But the legend persists. Edward Fitzgerald, his translator, deserves most of the credit. Otherwise Omar would be away out in front and riding hard. What is this sudden erudition?

* * *

One of the smartest looking clubs in town is that of The Grand Street Boys on West 55th st. Its members—such as Al Smith and Eddie Cantor—are those whose wits were sharpened on the lower East Side flagstones. Up-from-the-gutter lads, who have made niches for themselves without a pull of any sort.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Developing Personality

ARE YOUR feelings easily hurt?

Do you like to play games, whether you lose or win?

Do you like to daydream?

Do you like to show people that you are the boss?

Do you like to tell others the truth regardless of the reaction?

Do you have changing moods?

Do you like to accept ideas from others?

Think those questions over. Answer them honestly, yes or no. AND YOU WILL MEET YOURSELF!

Elsie Robinson

No—this isn't a new sort of parlor game. It's part of a serious questionnaire in Dr. Sadie Myers Shellow's friendly book—"HOW TO DEVELOP YOUR PERSONALITY."

You've envied people with charming personalities, haven't you? Wondered how they got that way. Wished you knew the trick. Well, here's the trick—according to Dr. Shellow.

Bit by bit, she shows you how to DISCOVER the truth about yourself and your attitude toward your world. For therein lies the beginning of a popular or unpopular personality.

What makes people like or dislike you?

Your attitude toward them makes them like you or dislike you. They do not love you or hate you for the things you are IN YOURSELF . . . but for YOUR EFFECT ON THEIR LIVES.

Do you make people feel at ease? Do you stimulate them? Then they will seek you out—reward you with their admiration and respect.

Or do you rub people the wrong way? Bore or depress them? Then they will avoid you or ignore you—warn others against you.

So popularity comes—or fails to come. Not because you have blue eyes and golden hair. Not because you talk or walk or dance in a certain way. BUT BECAUSE YOU THINK OR FEEL IN A CERTAIN WAY . . . AND BY THESE THOUGHTS AND FEELINGS AFFECT OTHER PEOPLE IN A CERTAIN WAY.

How do you think or feel?

Chances are, you, yourself, don't know! For it takes real wisdom and real training for a man to KNOW HIMSELF.

Dr. Shellow tells you how to know yourself . . . tells you how to "get that way." She shows you how to take yourself apart and put yourself together again, in a stronger, happier pattern.

Those questions which you have just read are part of that process. There the hundreds more. If you will answer them honestly, you'll make some amazing discoveries about yourself.

"WILL YOUR FACE BE RED?"

Yes, stranger, it certainly will!

And nothing could be better for what ails you.

Just Folks

Sunrise

Upon a restless bed I tossed, full-fretted by the thought of care,
And since sweet sleep refused to come, I rose to breathe the morning air.
I threw the window curtain up and though I looked with weary eyes
Upon the anxious-hearted world, I saw the golden sun arise.
Great shafts of glory streaked the east as night attended morning's birth.
Out of their nests the song birds came to sing the joy of life on earth.
Few men were yet awake to groan and grumble o'er their petty woes,
And I could find no sign of care or sorrow as the sun arose.
I watched the summer day begin, and thought: "'Tis strange till men awake
No sign disturbs the peace of dawn; all other creatures seem to take
A rapturous delight from life, despite the ills which they must bear.
Then should not man be just as brave as is that song bird singing there?"

Wise Words

The greatest cleverness of the least clever people is to know how to submit to the good guidance of other people.—La Rochefoucauld.

The greatest efforts of the race have always been traceable to the love of praise, as its greatest catastrophe to the love of pleasure.
—Ruskin.

Morality knows nothing of geographical boundaries or distinctions of race. —Spencer.

Let fools the studious despise,
There's nothing lost by being wise.

Whirling Dervish Hoover; Mr. Roosevelt

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

THE LAST WEEK was one of political significance. The New York State Department of the American Legion booed and hissed the name of Hoover when Trubee Davison, his Assistant Secretary of War and candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, was defending the use of gas bombs and tanks and bayonets in driving the bonus army from Washington. Mr. Davison was harping on the Hoover theme that a great part of the bonus army was composed of "tramps and hoodlums." That is a dangerous theme. There are many in America during the Hoover regime who are tramps because they cannot find work. That is the reason that by a vote of 499 to 138 the convention voted for the bonus now. Stupid leadership, the supercilious condescension of the upper crust does that every time. Those tanks rattling over the payments of the capital and those sweeping characterizations of unfortunates, out of work and eating the bread of charity, had a lot to do with that overwhelming vote of the New York Legion.

Cleveland's Tactics May Interest Norman

And America was interested, too, in the mysterious appearance under an assumed name of Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England. When ordinary men enter America under an alias they are speedily sent back. And Mr. Norman is a distinguished gentleman in banking and financial circles and required no alias to get in.

Evidently he entered under an assumed name and went into hiding in close proximity to the home of Mr. Lamont, of the Morgan Company, because it is thought best that the mass of the American people know nothing of his presence and his mission here.

That bodes nothing good for the mass of the American people.

Mr. Norman and our own international bankers are intent on transferring the debts of Europe to the backs of the Americans, and the Democrats have declared against the transfer.

If Mr. Norman is here to assist Mr. Hoover in his campaign he will do well to ask the Foreign Office in London for a report on what happened to a British Minister in the days of Cleveland.

Roosevelt Exposes Double-Crossing

Meanwhile Mr. Roosevelt during the week made two strong speeches. The speech at Sea Girt Saturday, pointing out the hypocrisy and deliberate misrepresentations of facts by Mr. Hoover, in his whirling dervish method on prohibition, was powerful and to the point

And yet in demonstrating the whirling dervish strategy of Mr. Hoover, it was an easy speech to make. It only required the marshaling and the marching of notorious facts still vivid in the memory of men.

First, that he double-crossed the anti-prohibitionists in 1928.

Second, that he double-crossed them in the attempt to submerge the promised investigation of prohibition by a Commission, by making it one of dozens of subjects to be investigated.

Third, that he sought to deceive the people as to the conclusions on prohibition reached by the members of the Commission; and this was done by a summing up that double-crossed the members.

Fourth, that, within four months, Mr. Hoover has said to a journalist that he is not in favor of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Fifth, that he, Mr. Hoover, acting through his man Friday, Mr. Mills, with the aid of almost 300 Federal officeholders in the convention, defeated the movement in the convention for a declaration for straight, honest repeal and forced through instead one of the most flagrantly dishonest and hypocritical planks ever written into a party platform.

Now all this was known and was the subject of editorial comment and private conversation before Mr. Hoover put on his second whirling dervish act.

• • •

Wet States Must Show Their Colors

This was inspired, not by cheers, but by hisses. Republican papers in industrial centers denounced the plank Mr. Hoover forced in. Borah and Butler united in the expression of their contempt. And there was much cheering when the Democrats took their stand four-square for repeal and the immediate modification of the Volstead Act and Mr. Roosevelt said in the convention—"From this hour the Eighteenth Amendment is doomed."

This was serious. The South is lost to Mr. Hoover. The Western farmers are up in arms—in open revolt. Without the industrial centers of the East, he would be the worst defeated man in history.

And so Mr. Hoover, in his acceptance speech, put on his new whirling dervish act, trying to make it a bit more subtle. Always an opportunist, he discovered that he is not adverse to repeal—sometime. The Hoover of August swallowed the Mr. Hoover of June, but he did not swallow the whole of the Mr. Hoover of the recent convention. He left enough of the dry stuff sticking out to serve as a standard to which all good drys could flock.

And to it they have flocked.

He is the drys' favorite—and the drys have sense—more political sense than the wets. Whether the wets have acquired any political sense will be learned when the returns come in from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

• • •

Hoover a Star as Whirling Dervish

Any anti-prohibitionist, not subnormal in intelligence, who will read the two platforms and then compare the acceptance speech of Mr. Hoover with the Sea Girt speech of Mr. Roosevelt will know where he belongs.

One thing that Sea Girt speech has done—it has smashed to smithereens the plot to whisper it about that Mr. Roosevelt really is not against prohibition and not in complete accord with the straightforward declaration of his party's platform.

Having nothing to conceal, having no passion for the whirling dervish methods of Mr. Hoover, Mr. Roosevelt made his position on prohibition so clear that even the most hopeless moron can understand it.

Garner Acceptance Superb Document

Another outstanding political event of the week was Speaker Garner's letter of acceptance, which is so strong, so conservatively worded, so statesmanlike, frank and courageous, that the Republican editorial writers have dropped it like a hot brick. It does not square with the "strategy" to picture the great Speaker of the House as a harum-scarum demagogue. So the falsehood is put in circulation that Garner's speech was "edited" by the Democratic "high command." There is not any one in this "high command" with more political ability or political experience than Jack Garner: and, of course, this story is out of the cloth.

That Garner speech should be given the widest circulation by the National Committee, for in few words he has set forth the issues powerfully. His downright declaration against the transfer of the debts and for a lowering of the tariff barriers against foreign trade to make possible their payment will not be attacked openly by the major part of the Republican press.
